CORLISS FAMILY.

[A. W. CORLISS.]

1 GEORGE CORLISS, the founder of the Corliss Family in the United States, was born in or near the city of Exeter, County of Devonshire, England, in 1617, and died at Haverhill, Mass., U. S., Oct. 19, 1686.

He came to America in 1639, and settled the same year at Newbury, Mass., but soon moved to Haverhill, Mass., where he resided until his death. The original tract of land on which he settled in 1640, and on which he had built a log house in 1647, was in what is known as the "West Parish" of the town. The farm is now known as "Poplar Lawn"; it has never been out of the hands of his direct descendants, and is now owned and occupied by Mr. Charles Corliss, the seventh in descent from the original owner. A view of the old homestead, as it now appears, is given on the next page.

Oct. 26, 1645, George Corliss was married, at Haverhill, to 2 JOANNA DAVIS, a daughter of Thomas Davis of Haverhill, formerly of Marlborough, England. This was the second marriage in the town.

George Corliss was a farmer. "Chase's History of Haverhill, Mass.," 1861, besides many other mentions of his name, has the following on page 60:—"Corliss was an enterprising and industrious man, and well qualified to take a prominent part in the settlement of a new town. He settled in the West Parish, on the farm of the late Ephraim Corliss,—now owned by his son Charles, who is of the seventh generation from the original grantee,—and at his death was possessed of a large landed property. He owned most of the land on both sides of the old "Spicket Path," as it was then called, for a distance of more than three miles."

Their children were born as follows:—

- 3 Mary; Sept. 6, 1646; d. Oct. 22, 1722. She married William Neff, of Haverhill. She was the companion of Mrs. Hannah Dustan, of Haverhill, who was captured by the Indians, in 1697, and aided her in killing her captors. For this heroic act they were voted a reward by the General Court. On June 17, 1874, a monument was erected to their memory, at the scene of their exploit, six miles north of Concord, New Hampshire.

These five, with the sixty-one who signed in person or by proxy, completes the roll of sixty-six. This roll, as it was made out before the town was divided, contains the names of the soldiers of Cumberland, Freeport, Pownal, and, perhaps, of Harpswell and New Gloucester.)

HAYES FAMILY.

Miss AUGUSTA C. DAVIS.

The following account of the Hayes Family was handed me by Mrs. Cyrus F. Sargent, of Yarmouth, Maine. The hand-writing is that of her grand-father, Deacon Jacob Hayes.

“John Hayes and Ichabod Hayes were the first of that name in this country ; they came from Scotland,—time unknown. Ichabod journeyed to the West, and settled in one of the Middle or Southern States, which is all that is known of him. John settled in Dover, N. H., and married Miss —— Horne, aged thirteen, by whom he had John, Ichabod, Peter, Benjamin, William, Robert and Samuel. Peter was the father of Deacon John Hayes, who settled in North Yarmouth, Maine, and from whom sprung those named Hayes now living in that town. The son of Ichabod married John’s daughter, and from them descended Deacon John Hayes, now living at Dover, N. H. John and Ichabod were his great-grand-children. Mrs. —— Greene, wife of Dr. —— Greene, of Dover, was the daughter of Reuben Hayes, a brother of John Hayes who settled in North Yarmouth.

The first known date in regard to the descent of the Hayes family is ascertained from the following circumstance :—At the funeral of Deacon John Hayes, eldest son of John Hayes the original emigrant from Scotland, a gold ring was given, according to the then existing custom, to the minister of the Parish, Mr. —— Cushing. Upon this ring is the date of the death of the deceased, 1759, and his age, 73 years. By the intermarriage of the Cushing with the Hayes family, this ring has descended and finally come into the Hayes family in a direct line from the original donor, and is now in the possession of Deacon John Hayes, of Dover, the great-grandson of the donor.

The following note from a little volume, entitled "A Long Journey," by Charles W. Hayes, Rector of St. Luke's Church, Portland, Maine, may be of interest:—"Four families of the name of Hayes are given in Savage's great work, "The Genealogical Dictionary of New-England," as having settled in New-England during the seventeenth century. These are,—1st, Thomas Hayes, at Milford, Conn., 1645; 2d, Nathaniel, at Norwalk, Conn., 1652; 3d, John, at Dover, N. H., 1680; 4th, George, at Windsor, Conn., 1682.

All these, it is said, are of the same stock, and from Scotland; the latter is certainly true of the families of Dover and Windsor.

Both the Dover and Windsor families have long preserved a tradition in regard to their origin, which really belongs to the far more distinguished family of Hay, of Scotland. The story runs thus: "In the reign of Kenneth III., of Scotland, A. D. 980, the Danes, who had invaded Scotland, having prevailed at the battle of Luncart, near Perth, were pursuing the flying Scots from the field, when a countryman and two sons appeared in a narrow pass, through which the vanquished were hurrying, and impeded for a moment their flight. "What," said the rustic, "had you rather be slaughtered by your foes than die honorably in the field? Come, rally, rally!" And he headed the fugitives, brandishing the yoke of his plough, and crying out that help was at hand; the Danes, believing that a fresh army was falling upon them, fled in confusion, and the Scots thus recovered the laurels which they had lost, and freed their country from servitude. The battle being won, the old man, afterwards known by the name of Hay, was brought to the king, who, assembling a Parliament at Scone, gave to the said Hay and his sons, as a joint reward for their valor, as much land on the river Tay, in the district of Gowrie, as a falcon from a man's hand flew over till it settled; which being six miles in length, was afterwards called Errol; and the king being desirous to elevate Hay and his sons from their humble rank in life, assigned them a coat of arms, which was argent, three escutcheons, gules, to intimate that the father and two sons had been the three fortunate shields of Scotland. The stone on which the falcon lighted is still to be seen in the "Carse of Gowrie," in a small village called Hawkstone. The tradition, however embellished by time and romance, has, undoubtedly, a foundation in truth; and the lowly family of Hay have borne, for at least eight hundred years, not only the "three escutcheons gules," but a broken ox-yoke as part of their crest, two Danes in armor as their supporters (one of them with a plough-staff, or "plough-paddle," as the Scotch call it) and the apt motto, "Renovate Animos."

There are several versions of the story, besides the above; but all agree that the name, Hay or Hayes, came from this incident, some adding that it was part of the reward of valor; why, we are not told, nor what the word originally meant. One of the best authenticated accounts gives the name of the hero as John de Luz.

If the Hayeses of New-England, who have so long cherished this tradition, have really any claim upon it, they must, of course, be of the same stock as their more illustrious countrymen, and their name originally the same. Some of them claim to have documentary proof of this identity of origin: but this proof I have not seen. It is certain, however, that the surname of the Scotch family of Hay is found in several different forms. For six generations from William, to whom King William granted the lands of Errol, and who died in 1170, the name was De Haya. In 1451, it first appears as Hay; and in the seventeenth century it is given (in the family of Leys) as Hays. Again, the only English family of the name of Hayes whose arms are recorded (of Arborfield, Berks) have 'the three escutcheons gules,' as the principal bearing, and the falcon crest. But among the Scotch arms emblazoned in the Hall at Abbotsford, are those of Rutherford (family of Sir Walter Scott's mother) and Hayes, the latter a cross, between four stars, with the falcon crest, and motto, "RECTE." ADVENTURES OF JOHN DRINKWATER.

[Miss MARY G. PRINCE.]

The hardy mariners of North Yarmouth have ever stood among the foremost of their profession for enterprise and endurance, and have won fortune in the face of perils by sea and by land.

The "plain unvarnished tale," now given to the readers of "OLD TIMES," is of one, who, at the close of the last century, underwent extraordinary hardships, and displayed, in a most remarkable manner, the fearlessness, courage and resolution characteristic of his family.

John Drinkwater, the hero of my story, was the second child of John Drinkwater, and grandson of Joseph Drinkwater, the first of that name who settled on Cousins' Island, within the limits of North Yarmouth. He was, probably, born at Prince's Point, about 1765, and, early in life, became a mariner.

In 1795, when he was thirty years of age, Mr. Drinkwater sailed from Boston as mate or super-cargo of an American ship, bound for Africa to trade with the natives. The destination of the ship was, probably, some port on the west coast, a little to the southward of Cape Palmas. There was a considerable amount of specie on board, to be used in trading operations.

When they were about half-way across the Atlantic, the officers and crew mutinied, and killed the captain, on deck, one bright moonlight night. As none of the mutineers understood navigation, they spared Mr. Drinkwater's life on account of his superior knowledge of that branch, and compelled him to direct the course of the vessel towards the shores of Africa. For some unknown reason, the life of a young man, twenty-two years of age, nephew of the captain, and native of a small town near Boston, was also spared.

Neither threats nor flattery, however, could induce Mr. Drinkwater or his companion to promise the mutineers that they would never reveal the murder of the captain, and, in consequence, they lived in daily expectation of being murdered themselves.

At last, the ship anchored in a bay, probably, on the coast of Guinea. When ready for sea, the mutineers sent Mr. Drinkwater, the young man, and two sailors ashore in a boat, to get a supply of water. They were moderately successful at first, and while the sailors were filling some of the casks with water, it was proposed that the party should separate and go in different directions in pursuit of natural springs.

Mr. Drinkwater and his young friend wandered off together, and, after some time, returned to the shore, when, to their horror, they found the boat and the two sailors gone, and saw the ship, with all sails set, standing out to sea. They were then convinced that the mutineers had determined to abandon them.

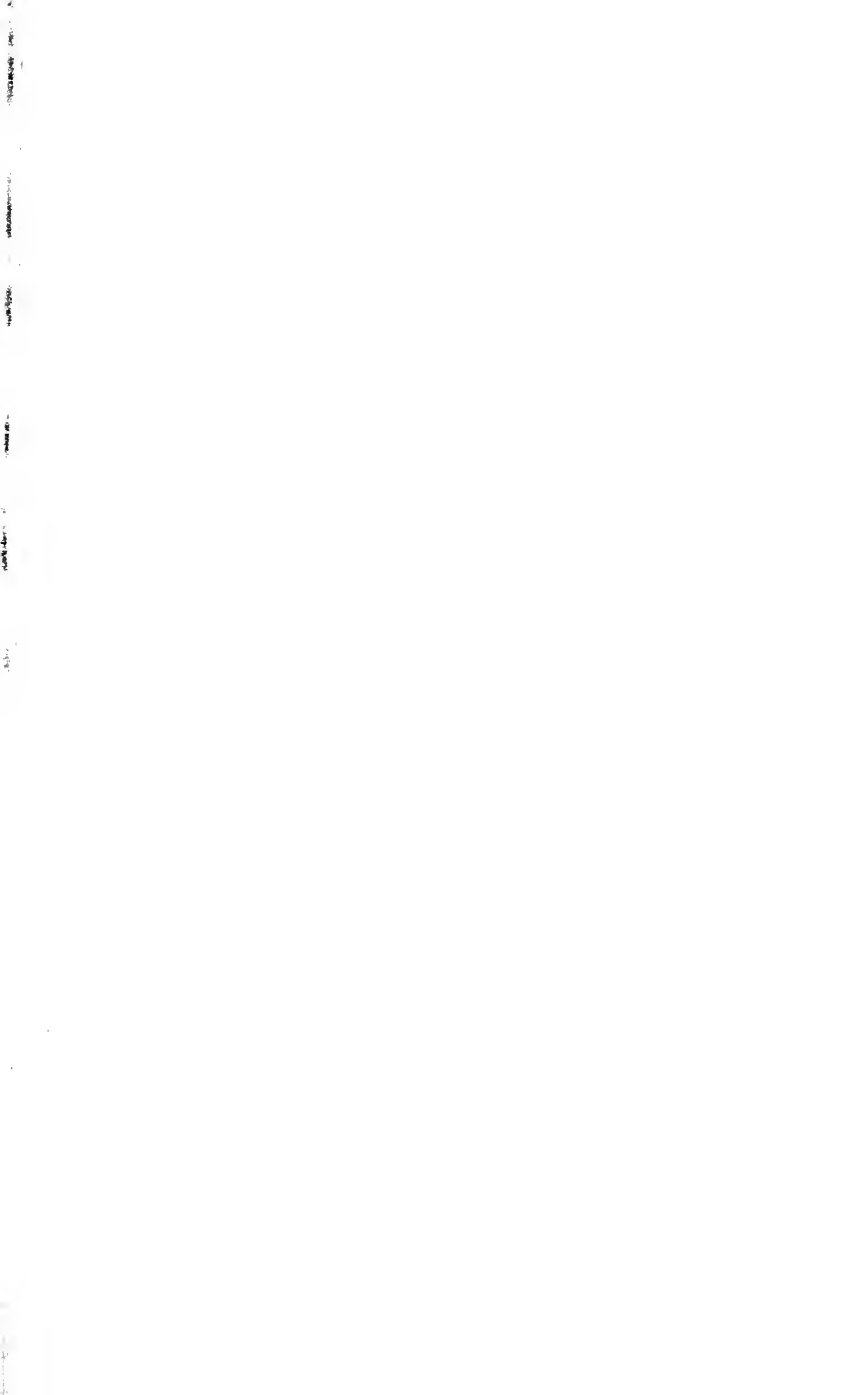

When they found themselves alone on that desolate coast, the boy threw himself on the ground in an agony of grief. Mr. Drinkwater urged him to keep up good courage, and endeavored to cheer his sinking spirits by presenting the necessity of travelling towards some settlement, where they would obtain food and shelter.

They then followed the sea-coast in a southerly direction, subsisting on crabs, fish, &c, and sleeping under trees, but on the afternoon of the third day, the young man died, exhausted and broken-hearted. Mr. Drinkwater dug a grave, and buried him on the sea-shore, where the wild beasts would not devour his remains. He then pursued his lonely journey through the wilderness, keeping as much as possible near the coast, in hopes of sighting a vessel.

He sometimes slept upon the ground, but when compelled to travel through the forests, would generally shelter himself before night-fall among the branches of some tall tree, where, resting in safety, he could hear the wild beasts howling, as they roamed through the wilderness. Often did he behold their fiery eyes, gleaming with baffled rage, when they came to the foot of the tree among whose boughs he lay concealed.

He found a scanty subsistence on eggs, nuts and wild fruit. He dared not jump across creeks, for fear of crocodiles, and was often obliged to follow the small rivers nearly up to their sources, in order to find a suitable crossing-place.

After some time, he saw a native, who, when he called him, ran away in a great fright. Some weeks later, he came across another native, who having visited the Dutch settlements of South Africa, had become partly civilized. This person supplied him with a kettle, a hatchet and a tinder-box, and told him not to have a fire after sundown. He also advised him never to sleep on the ground, but always to climb the palm trees.

At last, after travelling sixteen weeks through the wilderness; his clothing in tatters, and his feet bleeding and sore, he reached the Dutch settlements in Caffraria, south of the Orange river, where were extensive rice plantations cultivated by negroes. Here he was received with hospitality, and remained about seven months.

On his arrival, an old negro woman, named Betsy, prepared some soup for him, and to express her compassion, stood behind him while he was eating, and brushed his hair. She also patted his shoulders, and blessed him. While among these people, he gained their affection and confidence by assisting them in building a boat, of which art they were quite ignorant.

When, at length, he felt desirous of proceeding on his journey through the wilderness towards the Cape of Good Hope, two Englishmen, who were servants on one of the rice plantations, assured him that if he would secrete himself in the day, they would conduct him by night to Cape Town. These precautions must have been taken to avoid the hostilities of the natives and the Dutch settlers.

After some time, he reached Cape Town in safety, and shipped as a hand on board a slaver, named Portsmouth, from Portsmouth, New Hampshire.

But his hopes of reaching home were again doomed to disappointment, as, while on the slaver, he was impressed, and taken on board a British ship, on which he remained three years. After many vicissitudes, he reached Boston in 1802, and soon proceeded to Portland. It happened that he was obliged to walk from Portland to North Yarmouth, and on reaching his own residence, soon after midnight, he went to the window of the room where his wife slept, and knocked. She, supposing that some neighbor was sick, asked, "Who is there?" upon which he replied, "It is John Drinkwater." She recognized the tones of his voice, and rising at once, gave him a joyful welcome whom she had, for seven years, mourned as dead.

The extreme sufferings and privations that he had endured, had, however, seriously impaired his health, and he died Mar. 7, 1812, at the early age of 47 years.

Mr. Drinkwater was a man of warm-hearted and generous disposition, and his pluck and endurance are sufficiently shown in this brief recital of his remarkable adventures.

On telling the story of his long years of exile to friends at home, some of them urged him to have an account of his journey in Africa published, and Dr. Thomas Green, then pastor of the Baptist church, offered to undertake the task, but, for some reason, it was never accomplished.

I am indebted to Mr. Drinkwater's daughter, Mrs. Julia Bucknam, and to his grandchildren, Mrs. William Baker and Captain Nicholas Drinkwater for the materials of this narrative, the first ever given to the public. It is, therefore, substantially correct, but there are people now living in Yarmouth who remember Mr. Drinkwater's return, and who may, perhaps, furnish additional and more interesting particulars. (230)

SUNSET.

[SAMUEL DORRANCE SEABURY.]

(Thursday, July 18th, 1878.)

Just out beyond the quiet town,
A low-browed, rocky hill looks down
On sea and land.

There, strolling slow at close of day,
A twilight scene before me lay,
Surpassing grand.

With fragrance rare, that Nature yields
From dewy vales and new-mown fields,
The air was filled;
And silv'ry notes, now far, now near,
Fell softly on the charmed ear,
From bird-land trilled.

The sun, ere parting from the west,
Had wreathed around each mountain
A halo bright; [crest,
Then stooped, the weary world to bless,
And lingered long, with warm caress,
On each fair height.

A wondrous light then filled the skies,
Till seemed the courts of Paradise
Were open thrown,
And angel bands of radiant men,
From out the gates of pearly sheen
Had earthward flown,

In glowing hues, with artist hand,
To deck the sky, and sea, and land,
Like worlds on high.

With raptured look, around I glance;
Such sight, such scene, might well
The earthly eye! [entrance

The fleecy clouds, that lightsome float,
Each now became a crimson boat,
With amber sails;
And guided by those spirit hands,
Were wafted far to unseen lands,
By ether gales.

The woodlands dim, where shadows
creep,
And hush the insect-world to sleep,
In soft moss-bed;
Rejoice again, as though, new-born,
The rosy light of summer morn,
O'er them were shed.

Fair Casco—by whose graceful side
A thousand lovers constant bide,
While thousands more,
Amid her Island bowers roam,
Or seek the rocks, where, fringed with
The wild waves roar— [foam,

Fair Casco, with resplendent face,
Welcomes the royal guests who grace,
Her cavern halls;
And smiles to see, in raiment bright,
Her sea-nymphs sport, 'mid golden light
That downward falls.

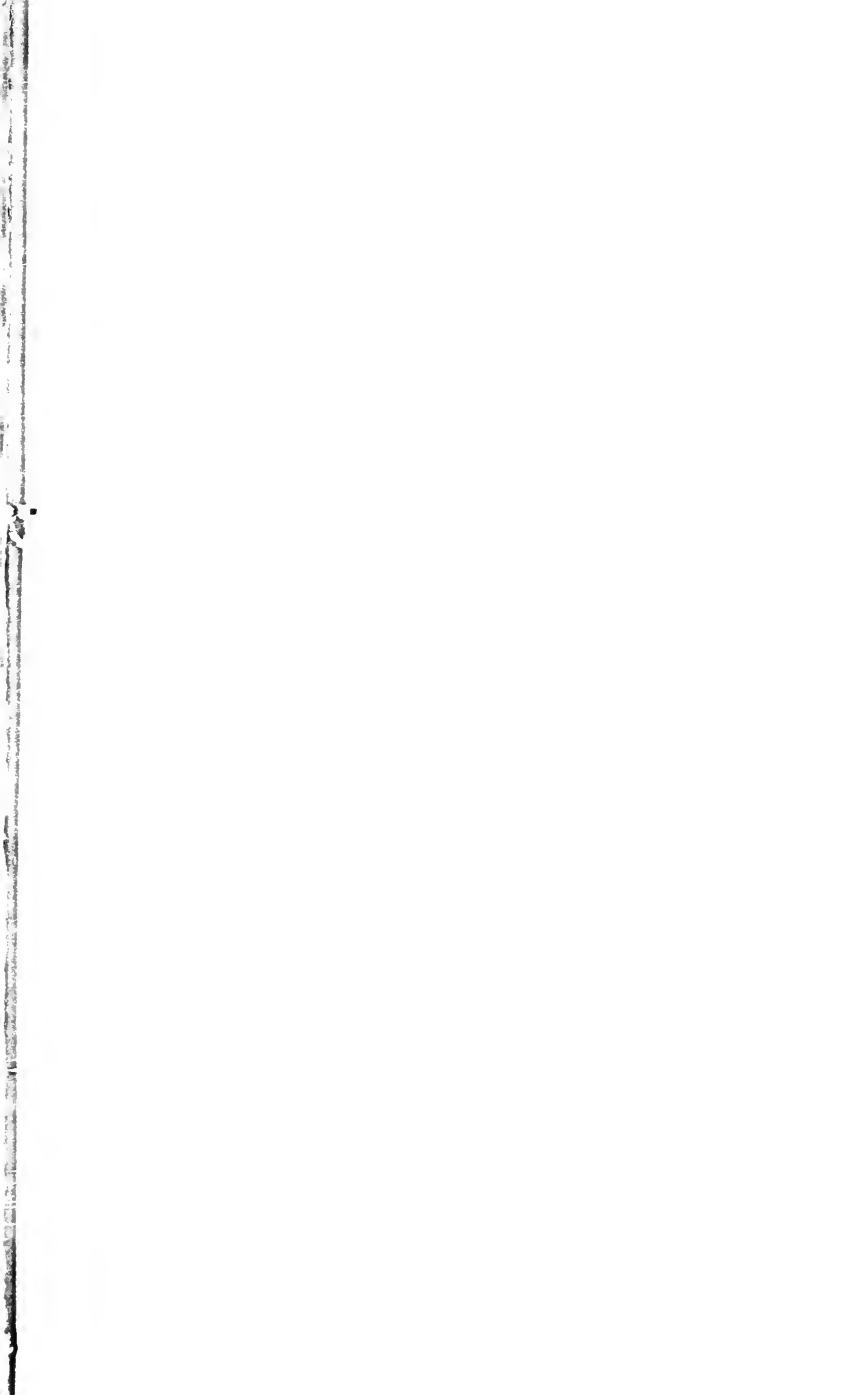

Passes the regal scene away;
It was Midsummer's bridal-day
Of earth and sky!

And, as I lingered, loth to miss
One fading gleam, I saw them kiss
The day good-bye.

CORRECTIONS TO ARTICLE ON THE OLD CHURCH.

[NICHOLAS DRINKWATER.]

I have perused Miss Mason's historical sketch of the old meeting-house, and, although it is nearly correct, there are some errors which I desire to point out, having for my authority my mother-in-law, Mrs. Lucy Gray, who lives in my family.

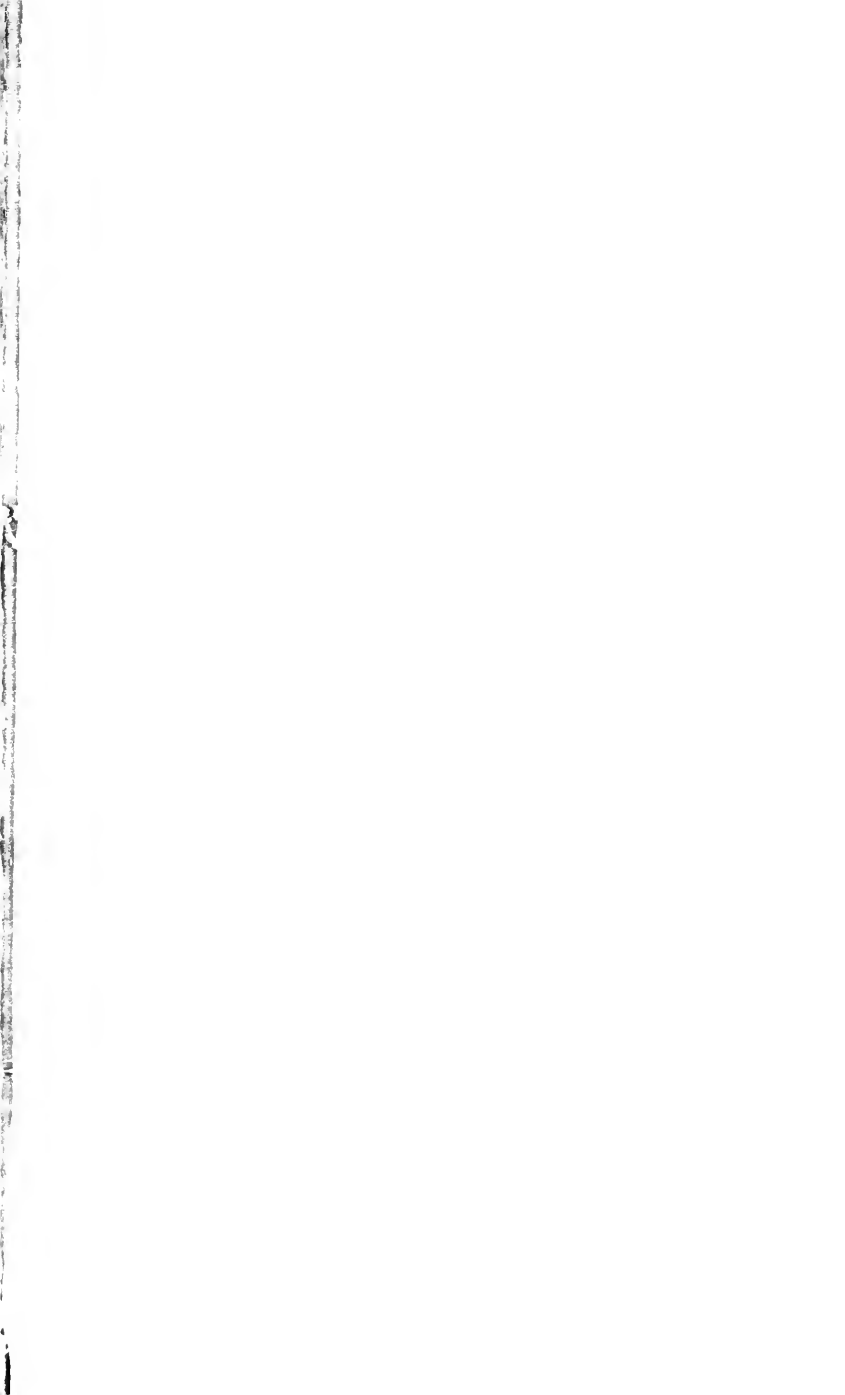

Mrs. Gray was born in North Yarmouth, at the Foreside, Dec. 19, 1790, and was christened in the old church in the summer of 1796, and was a regular attendant there until the fall of 1829, a period of more than thirty years. She has a very vivid recollection of the plan of the old church, of the families who worshiped there, and of the pew which each family occupied previous to the division of the church, which took place during the pastorate of Mr. Woodbury.

Mrs. Gray says there were no such pews as Nos. 14 and 31 in the plan on page 177 "OLD TIMES," and she is confident that there were but thirty-two pews in the body of the house in the last days of its existence, and that originally there were but twenty-eight, six on each side of the broad aisle, and that there was a seat on each side of the aisle in front of these pews, for the use of those who were hard of hearing; and she distinctly remembers that when the children were assembled to be catechised, they were ranged on those two seats.

After the death of Mr. Gilman, there were four pews made where the seats above mentioned were,—two on each side of the broad aisle,—those numbered 1, 2, 18 and 19 in the plan.

If this statement is correct (and there is no reason to doubt it), the pew No. 2, which Miss Mason says her ancestor, Jonas Mason, owned, could not have been made until after his death. Mrs. Gray says that she remembers Mr. Jonas Mason as a very pious man who always occupied the Deacons' seat; he died when she was a young girl, apparently very aged. She further affirms that neither he nor any of his descendants ever occupied pew No. 2, but always sat in the pew directly behind her father's, No. 29,—Capt. Samuel, Capt. Alford, and Capt. Samuel the great-grandson of Jonas Mason.

I will give the name of each family, as specified by Mrs. Gray, having before me the plan presented in your magazine for April, 1878, page 177, viz:—Pew No. 1, Beza Loring; 2, owner unknown, but thinks Joseph Mason and some of the Moxcey family sat in it;

3, David Spear, who married a Moxcey, and some of that family sat in his pew; 4, right; 5, Major — Mitchell, (does not remember that Sylvanus Blanchard had a pew); 6, right; 7, William Bucknam; 8, Col. Jotham Mitchell; 9, right; 10, Capt. Greely Sturdivant; 11, Capt. Joseph Sturdivant, instead of Samuel Bucknam; 12, unknown; 13, right; 14, no such pew; 15, Pratt family; 16, John Cutter,—also occupied by Ephraim Sturdivant; 17, right; 18, William Gooding; 19, Samuel Lawrence; 20, Col. — Lawrence; 21, right; 22, Capt. Joseph Sturdivant; 23, 24, 25, 26 and 27, right; 28, Capt. Joseph Gray; 29, Mason family; 30, right; 31, no such pew; 32, right; 33, Capt. John Gray, and, as he married into the Robbins family, probably some of the family with him; 34, right; 35, Mary Millett, familiarly known as Granny Millett; 36, right; 37, Deacon Jacob Hayes (Betty Carman did not own a pew; 38, she thinks, was James Hill's, the father of James C. Hill, (the Marsh family may have used it); 39, 40 and 41, right; 42, Lovell family; 43, Lewis family; 44, right; 45, Amos Storer; 46, Gen. Edward Russell; 47, Capt. Bela Blanchard; 48, right; 49, unknown; 50, Roland Hamilton; 51, 52 and 53, right; 54, Capt. Andrew Gray. All the rest are right. No. 61, left blank, was the pew of the Fisher family, and, she thinks, was also occupied by the Baker family. This is, no doubt, as correct a record as can be furnished at this late day.

Mrs. Gray is probably the oldest person living who attended meeting in the old meeting-house, and has, I have no doubt, the best recollection of that old structure, and of the people who worshipped there at the beginning of this century.

There is one other statement by Miss Mason which I wish to correct. She says that Rev. Samuel Woodbury was the last regular minister of the old church. Now I have the testimony of Mrs. Gray that Rev. Noah Cressey was called by a council, regularly ordained, and communicated religious instruction for eight or nine years, and closed his labors with the old church in the fall of 1829, when it was abandoned. As the church was torn down in the spring of 1836, it had been abandoned but about five or six years, instead of fifteen or sixteen, as Miss Mason says.

In "Notes & Queries," Vol. 2, No. 2, the old Whitcomb house is mentioned as being on the Foreside. It is on Royall's River, a short distance below the lower falls.

Another note says that the Gurney [Gooding] house is the oldest in town, except the Whitcomb house. This may be true, but there is a large, square, old-fashioned house, standing at the Foreside, owned by Joseph G. Merrill, but better known in ancient times as the "Granny Millett house," that was built before the Revolutionary War, and how long before, no one living knows. It was built by Mr. — Ring, who afterwards sold it to a son of Granny Millett, who went privateering in the Revolutionary War, and paid for the house out of his prize money. Granny Millett was a very eccentric old lady. Tradition says that she raised a pig every year, and, when she killed it, large or small, she had it cut into three hundred and sixty-five pieces,—one for each day of the year. As she lived in the old house nearly if not quite a century ago, and it was built long before she lived in it, it is, no doubt, the oldest house in town, except the Whitcomb house.

I have had a copy of Gen. Edward Russell's Address for over thirty years, and notice the following differences between it and the re-print in No. 2, Vol. 2, "OLD TIMES," viz ;—On page 194, "on the farm now owned by Deacon ——— Halpes, [Staples?]," should read Deacon John Hayes, as he owned the place in 1833 ; it is now owned by William E. Bucknam. At the end of the first paragraph, on the same page, after the word "aborigines," should be added the words, "an epitaph more glorious than any civilized nation can boast on earth." (233)

Notes and Queries.

GRAY—Some months ago, I sent to Old Times a request for information in regard to the parentage of my ancestress, Mehitable (Gray) Cutter. I wished to ascertain whether she was the child of the first or second wife of Capt. Andrew Gray. I learned soon afterwards, on, I think, good authority, that the children of Capt. Gray's first wife (whose maiden name I do not know) were all sons. The second wife, Zeruah Standish, (daughter of Ebenezer Standish of Plympton, whose father, Alexander, was a son of Capt. Myles Standish,) had two daughters and no sons. Mehitable Gray, therefore, must have been the child of the second wife, and great-grand-daughter of the sturdy defender of the Puritans. (2-227)

AUGUSTA C. DAVIS.

WELLCOME—There is another name deserving honorable mention in the pages of Old Times,—that of Mrs. M. D. Wellcome, well known as a writer of book reviews and religious articles, and also as a preacher of no small power. She is at the same time, a lady of the most sterling personal traits,—of a warm heart, and unassuming manners,—mistress of all home graces and accomplishments, and never losing in public the refinements that always distinguishes her private life. D. (3-227)

MITCHELL—The following corrections to the Mitchell Family, published in the last number of Old Times, pages 247-55, are made by Mr. Wm. M. Sargent :—No. 71, Rachel, married 1824; No. 30, Nicholas L., died Jan. 28, 1827; No. 94, married Dr. George W. Haley. (219)

BUCKNAM—Samuel Bucknam, Columbia Falls, Maine, Nov. 5, 1877, writes that his great-grandfather was William Bucknam, of North Yarmouth. His grandfather, John Bucknam, son of the above William, settled at Columbia Falls about 1760, and married there, in 1773, to Mary Wilson, of Kittery. (190)

OLD LETTER—Dr. Charles E. Banks, 432 Congress Street, Portland, Maine, Oct. 13, 1878, sends the following:—

BOSTON, June 8, 1804.

Sir:—

Business in the General Court goes on pretty well, although the Federal majority is not large and, perhaps not so much as heretofore, yet it is firm and they are unitedly determined to support the manly dignity that becomes those who espouse the cause of their country upon a basis that only can hold it up.

A Committee of both Houses has been raised (of which I have the honor to be one) to devise and report the most eligible mode of choosing Electors of President and Vice-President. After serious deliberation, unanimously reported a general ticket. It will be debated in the Senate to-day. Undoubtedly it will be violently opposed by the Jacobins, and will call forth the talents of both Parties. I sincerely hope that, thit Divine Providence which over-rules events always for good, when consistent with the general divine plan, will order this measure in much mercy.

Another matter, perhaps more serious in its nature, will be brought on for consideration this session, but I can not communicate that at present. I hope to be at home week after next. My love to Mrs. Mitchell, the children and all the family. Yours, &c, AMMI R. MITCHELL.

Dr. Elias Banks, North-yarmouth.

THE LAST OF THE PILGRIMS.
DAVID PRINCE.

[ELIZABETH OAKES SMITH.]

Goodbye to Aunt Betty (S.V. 12)

I remember when I was a very little child, I, having the greatest reverence for my grand-parents, used to feel myself annoyed not a little in hearing them designated as "Aunt Betty" and "Uncle David." "Esquire Prince" did not trouble me: but that people nowadays allied to them should call them "Aunt" and "Uncle" troubled my immature judgment as an unwarrantable liberty. This custom, at once respectful and tender, by which in old times the heads of a family well-to-do and respected were designated by their neighbors, has nearly if not quite disappeared under our more artificial form of society; but it had a sweetness of savour about it in the olden times worth being held in remembrance.

Once, in talking with a man old enough to be my father, about the time my head began to be crowned with its dowry of white, I was not disagreeably startled by his beginning a sentence with, "Now Auntie," for I knew it implied a world of affectionate respect, and reminded me of the times when people used to address my handsome Grandame as "Aunt Bettie." Her name was Elizabeth,—I having been named for her,—and nothing could exceed the kindness with which I was always welcomed to the Old Homestead. I was a delicate, sensitive child, religious from the first, and I think these things endeared me to all. I was never in the least sickly, only a harsh word or look weighed too heavily upon me, hence I was shielded everywhere and by everybody, and most especially at the Homestead as if I had been a shorn lamb, to whom the breath of heaven must be tempered. The only wonder is that I did not grow up utterly selfish, and divested of all sympathy for others. That I was thoughtful, and read everything I could lay my hands on,—would sit for hours poring over some old polemical treatise when no more than seven or eight years old, was a passport to the favor of my grandfather; and when he would sometimes ask me questions about what I read, I think he was well pleased with my answers, for sometimes he would lay his hand carressingly upon my head, though he made no comment. Often he would take me by the hand and we would walk together in the woods; I did most of the talking,—he occasionally dropping a thoughtful remark, some noble or beautiful sentiment,—and I think we were both conscious of a supreme sense of tranquil content.

He never laughed at my many questionings,—never checked my little outbreaks of poetry,—never rebuked the almost excess of my happy spirits. He would sit down with me upon some glittering granite rock, and study with me the perfect creation of an insect or the beauty of a flower. Once when I had brought in from the corn-field a handful of the golden silk above the ear, he sat down and told me that where I had pulled out the silk no kernels of corn would fill upon the cob. “Why? why?” I eagerly asked. “I do not know why, my child; I only know the fact.”

It will be remembered that Botany as a science did not exist at that time. I well remember I drew some roots of what was known as the “golden-thread” from the ground, and at the same time unearthed a pretty species of lizard, with yellowish-brown skin, and ruby spots upon the head, and he talked with me a long time in his low rich voice of the perfectness of the works of God, and the beauty existing in all things. It was the sweetness, the reverence, breathing through all his intercourse with me, that has left an indelible impression upon my mind. There was a dignity and serenity in his voice and movements that had a lovely idealism in them. His voice, always rich and full, assumed a depth and pathos in prayer, that I have never known equalled. He used Scripture language in a great degree, and I wondered what a saintly man like him could mean by, “We have hewn to ourselves cisterns, broken cisterns that can hold no water.”

Always at twilight, rain or shine, he used to go out in the woods, like Isaac of old, to meditate, and I often wished to go with him; but as he never gave me any encouragement to follow, and I was too honorable a child to go clandestinely, I did not know for years the purport of this custom of his. Once, however, in gathering wild flowers, I came upon a solitary spot where the granite eroded out from the ground, making a platform upon which a bowlder split in twain had lodged, producing a beautiful altar-stone,—the heavy trees clustered densely around, the gray granite was flecked with moss,—the wild birds sang in the branches, and the sun rays glinted through the thick foliage; it was a lovely secluded temple, more beautiful than cathedral aisles, and here was the place of prayer of the grand old Puritan. I knelt reverently down and offered the prayer of childhood, filled with a profound awe. Later in life, I once sought this unprofaned place of prayer, when the earth was covered with its drapery of snow,—and there was the altar-stone, cleared from the snow, and showing recent occupation.

The usages of the old Pilgrim families were very unlike what we find in their descendants. The workmen and work-women were treated more like children than dependants. They sat in the pew at church, or had seats provided for them elsewhere. As they were all of American or, as one may say English origin, and belonged to the neighboring small farmers, they were by no means ignorant or uncouth. The family in winter breakfasted before daylight; the meal being followed immediately by morning prayer and reading of the Scriptures by my grandfather. No one kneeled in prayer, but they mostly tipped a chair upon two of its legs and leaned over it, sometimes leaning the back against the wall.

It was a diligent family,—very regular, very orderly, and entirely devoid of harshness of any kind, or the least aspect of fretting; a truly harmonious christian household. There was an abundance of counterpanes made of bright colors, woven in the house; snowy linen, and fleecy blankets,—all home-made. I used to like to open old drawers and high chests, from whence issued the aromas of lavender, and linen impregnated with the freshness of new clover or fragrant grass; piles of sheets and pillow-cases only used on extra occasions. I remember the wonderful quilting of glossy blue quilts, lined with golden flannel. I used to sleep in a bed hung with blue chintz on which were pictures of girls in brief skirts with sheaves of wheat in their arms,—and youths with wonderful legs, and jaunty hats, and sickles over their shoulders. As I saw nobody appear in that style, I concluded they must be Gypsies, about whom I read. As I lay awake under those hangings, the moon shining through the window, and the tick of the old clock heard in the distance, the silence of the place was the most intense I have ever known elsewhere,—it seemed as if everybody had stopped breathing, and I heard my own heart, and I heard the trees leaning and talking to each other. Once I crept out of bed, for I was certain I had heard something creep through the grass; and there on a rock near the window I saw a black snake moving slowly along. I was seized with a strange dread and screamed aloud, which brought so many kind hearts and hands to see what was the matter, that I was ashamed to tell; and so I smothered the dreadful secret, by my childish fancy conceived, that, "that old Serpent, the devil," about whom children were always taught in those days, had come sneaking around after me.

It was a cheerful household,—a large number of men and women being employed in the various kinds of industry pertaining to a large family. I remember there were horses and colts,—a great many oxen, sheep and cows; there were huge barns to go to which we had to pass the "stringers," that is, two great hewn logs that spanned a little stream, along which grew "sagittaria," and sweet-flag, or calamus root. When milking was to be done, men and women repaired with white pails to a large yard around the great barns, and in fine weather it was a pleasant sound to hear their voices in concert singing old ballads or the lyrics current at the time. One girl, a sort of attendant upon my grandmother, had a fine voice, and the whitest arms and shoulders I ever saw.

I delighted to go into the weaving-room, where the shirr of the wheels, and the bang of the loom was always relieved by the singing of the women. I learned to "quill," that is, to wind the yarn upon the spools for the weaver, so that I might be the better tolerated in the room, where I was sometimes painfully conscious in my sensitive child way, of being "de trop," by hearing them say, "little pitchers have great ears," &c. Here I heard the "Nut-Brown Maid," "Fair Rosamond," "Queen Eleanor," "Braes of Yarrow," "Cruel Barbara Allen," and other ballads, which I afterwards found in "Percy's Relics of Ancient English Poetry." These of course were brought over from England by the Pilgrims, orally, and were passed about in manuscript.

The Old Homestead was reached through a park of old trees, giving beautiful vistas of distant hills and gleams of fields and hamlets. It is now fallen to decay; but in my childhood it was an oasis of verdure,—an opening into sunshine and home-like peacefulness. The great fat swine, kept discreetly at some distance from the house; the vast numbers of poultry, the gleams of cheerful faces here and there,—and snatches of song, were by no means contemptible sights and sounds.

There were four oak trees, of moderate size, that had found a rooting where the gray granite cropped out of the soil, and my sister and I chose it for our bower. Two of these trees stood nearer together at the back than the two in front, and upon the latter we inscribed our names. We placed a seat by means of large stones under these trees, and passed days there with our dolls and books, listening to the birds and the hum of bees lodged in a large pine tree close at hand. My grandfather was pleased to see us there, and would not allow the trees to be cut down, as an uncle once thought to do.

These were primitive days, when the farm was sufficient to itself,—the flax was raised, spun and woven on the premises. I think now it was a pretty picture when my grandmother, who was plump, with very handsome white arms and hands, sat at the little wheel, spinning flax,—no cotton was used in the family. My grandmother's brocades and grandfather's velvets were put away in lavender; high-heeled shoes and wonderful "stays," full of whalebone, taken out only for airing,—while the wool was dyed, spun and wove that made the yearly new suit, upon the farm. Once a year a cheery shoemaker appeared, hammering at his last, and singing songs; and the tailoress also, who brought her "goose," and cut and snipped and pressed. She had a long, high head and a hunch-back; mine used to ache just to look at her, and I expended a good deal of pity upon her, thinking it a terrible thing to be so deformed, when in fact she was well content, and clicked money in her large, long bony hands, with a sort of unctuousness that I could not understand. Then there was soap to be made yearly; and daily the great churn had its cream, and the great white tub its curds for cheese; and there was the screen full of cheeses; the heaps of apples in autumn, and the stone cellar with its "bins" of vegetables, and barrels of beef and pork. I went from place to place with a child's delight, and a sense of cheeriness and wholesomeness. One marvel of an apple-tree I remember, which had been split down by lightning, and the character of one-half of the fruit changed thereby, and we used to call such the "spice apples."

Down through the undulating mowing-meadows and corn-fields, through the "lower orchard," I used to go to a trout-brook, where on the moss-grown bridge I seated myself and watched the fish, and heard the birds, and saw the squirrels and the rabbits, and sometimes a fox stealing under the trees. I thought then, and think now I slept very near the dear heart of nature in those days, for no creature feared me, while I was wrapt in a sort of spiritual dream-life.

The ordering of the table at the Old Homestead was quite baronial,—it was long, and at the head were the master and mistress, and next the children,—sons on the father's side, and daughters opposite;—then the dependants according to their relative importance. My grandfather generally spoke upon something of interest, addressing members of the family,—those "above the salt" replying, or those below, if appealed to. Though the family were all seated except the youngest boy or girl, or "bound help" who waited upon the table, there was a tone of exclusiveness not to be overcome by these old Puritans. There was grace before and after meat,—brief and to the point.

I recollect one of my uncles had built himself a new brick house, with dining-room, &c. The first time grandfather ate there, he was shocked to see a change that excluded dependants to the table in the kitchen. After a silence, he said in his calm way, "Zenas, I do not know how you reconcile this to your conscience; what chance have your people for improvement when you deny them the opportunity of listening to the conversation and observing the manners of an intelligent family?"

I have a portrait of my grandfather at 93. He was still erect, with a fine, thoughtful face. In his youth, he was thought to have resembled Washington. I once asked him if it was so, when he blushed like a girl and said, "Yes, my child, it was so said."

The memory of such an ancestor is the best heir-loom to his posterity. (243)

CAPT. WILLIAM A. HOWARD.

Captain William A. Howard, of the United States Revenue Marine.

The above-named officer died at the village of Greenport, Long Island, [New York] on the 18th instant [— —, 1872] after enduring a severe illness of a few months' duration. He was captain in the United States Revenue Marine, and held the commission of Colonel of the Thirteenth New York Artillery Volunteers during the war. Captain Howard was a distinguished officer,—a man who spent a very active life. He was born in the State of Maine, [North Yarmouth : see page 31, "OLD TIMES"] in the year 1807.

Before entering the Navy, he distinguished himself as a lad by leading an expedition to cut out and rescue an American vessel from the British authorities. The vessel was seized by the English for infringing the fishery laws. At the age of seventeen, he entered the United States Navy. In 1828, he resigned his commission in the Navy to receive a captaincy in the Revenue Marine, being appointed to the command at the age of twenty-one. His services were successful in saving and assisting vessels in distress on the coast of New England, in appreciation of which the merchants of Boston presented him with a valuable service of silver.

In 1848, the German Confederacy appointed him second in command of the fleet on the Weser, at Brake, and he there constructed a navy yard and dock, and remained in charge until the breaking up of the fleet.

At the commencement of the late American war, Capt. Howard raised a regiment of marine artillery, which was attached to the Burnside Expedition. Returning North, he commenced organizing in New York a new regiment of heavy artillery, and raised 2500 men, who were detailed to active service with the Army of the James, Colonel Howard commanding the defences around Portsmouth and Norfolk.

At the close of the war, the Colonel resumed his commission in the Revenue Marine, visiting every port where Custom House duties were collected throughout the Union, travelling 40,000 miles in fourteen months, and was then by government detailed on special duty and sent to Alaska to hoist the American flag over our new possessions there.

The last service of Captain Howard to the government, was the superintending last year of building in New York of several steam launches for the Revenue Marine. (244)

THE GRAY FAMILY.

[NICHOLAS DRINKWATER.]

In perusing Dr. Charles E. Banks' "Notes on the Tax-List, 1759," explaining the ancestry of persons named therein, pages 303-5, "OLD TIMES," I notice that the part relating to the Grays, page 304, conveys the impression that the descendants of Andrew Gray are the descendants of Miles Standish.

Now I can safely assert that there are no descendants of Miles Standish living, having Gray blood in their veins transmitted by Andrew Gray. Zeuriah (Standish) Ring was the second wife of Andrew Gray, and had by him but one child, a son, Ebenezer, born Sept. 12, 1746, and died June 19, 1779. He married Dorcas Mitchell, but died childless.

Andrew Gray, my ancestor, was born about 1706; he was drowned in crossing Broad Cove, on the evening of Dec. 19, 1757. The maiden name of his first wife was Phebe Chandler. Their children were:—John, [280, 1st Ch. Cat.] b. Nov. 29, 1732, d. Dec. 27, 1796, m. Sarah Mitchell, [278, 1st Ch. Cat. : see No. 27, p. 249, O. T.] b. — —, 1736, d. May 17, [27?] 1796; Joseph, b. Nov. 19, 1734, d. July 17, 1792, m. Mary Loring, [429, 1st Ch. Cat.] b. — —, 1744, d. Nov. 9, 1796; Andrew, b. Jan. 23, 1736, d. Dec. 8, 1810, m., 1st, Elizabeth Bucknam, and, 2d, Wid. Margaret (Adams) Johnson, [621, 1st Ch. Cat.]; Mehitable, b. Dec. 15, 1739, d. Mar. 19, 1808, [248, 1st Ch. Cat.] m. Wm. Cutter, [247, 1st Ch. Cat.]; Rhoda, b. Jan. 12, 1741, d. Aug. 10, 1780, [283, 1st Ch. Cat.] m. Abraham Mitchell, [276, 1st Ch. Cat.]; Joshua, b. Jan. 22, 1743, settled in Barnstable, Mass., I believe, and m. — — — —, and had several children.

Phebe, the first wife of Andrew Gray, died Sept. 23, 1744. He married Zeuriah Ring, Dec. 19, 1745.

The three elder boys settled on the "Foreside," N. Yarmouth. John on the farm owned by the late Capt. Perez Drinkwater, Jr. Joseph owned the farm now owned by Capt. John Cleaves, and in 1796, built the house in which Capt. C. lives, the old one having been burned down in April of that year. Andrew lived on the premises I now occupy.

This I think is sufficient to correct wrong impressions, and I will leave the matter here, merely mentioning that I am the great-great-grandson of Andrew Gray, and my wife is the great-granddaughter. (246)

CUMBERLAND COUNTY

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

[WILLIAM M. SARGENT.]

(These actions relate only to those wherein people of North Yarmouth have been parties.)

Voi. 1, p. 627. April term, 1767. Ephraim Sturdivant and John Sturdivant, both of North Yarmouth, yeomen, plaintiffs, vs. John Davenport Cox, mariner, Oliver Blanche, brick-maker, and Thomas Dorset, laborer, all of Falmouth, defendants. In a plea of trespass,—for entering the plaintiffs' close, being an island known as Bangs' Island, in North Yarmouth, and cutting down and carrying away nine trees of more than a foot over, nine trees of a foot over, and nine trees under a foot in diameter, and carrying away twelve cords of wood. Issue joined: jury trial: verdict for plaintiffs, forty shillings damages and costs of court.

Vol. 1, p. 644. October term, 1767. Francis Wyman, of Georgetown, Lincoln County, yeoman, plaintiff, vs. Barnabas Soule, of North Yarmouth, yeoman, defendant. In a plea of ejectment.—Soule vouches in his warrantor John Orr, of Brunswick. Referred by agreement to Thomas Scales, Edmund Chandler and John Hayes; and further agreed that Soule shall remain in possession of the premises; the Referees to find the value and who shall pay the same. Referees report that Wyman is entitled to the possession, and assess the value at £10, and it is ordered by the Court that John Orr pay the same and costs of court.

Vol. 2, p. 124. October term, 1769. Jacob Brown, gentleman, plaintiff, of North Yarmouth, vs. William Brown, yeoman, defendant, of North Yarmouth. In a plea of trespass. The parties enter into a rule to refer the title of the land in controversy, on which the trespass is said to be committed, and also the title and possession of all the real estate which either party claims as heirs to their father, Jacob Brown, deceased, or brother John Brown, deceased, to the determination of referees (one of whom was Jonathan Mitchell,—the others being from Falmouth.) Referees report in favor of Jacob, and that William pay £5 for damages done him; and so ordered by the Court.

Vol. 2, p. 125. Another action, being a plea of the case between William Brown, plaintiff, and Jacob Brown, defendant, calls the said William the Executor of the will of his father, Jacob Brown, deceased, and Jacob as Administrator of his decea'd brother John's estate, and speaks of the division of said John's estate as divided and set off to them by Zachariah Chandler, John Lewis and Thos. Scales.

Vol. 2, p. 141. October term, 1769. Andrew Tuck, yeoman, of North Yarmouth, plaintiff, vs. Samuel and John Merrill, defendants. In a plea for trespass, for breaking and entering plaintiff's close at North Yarmouth, containing about forty acres, situated at the lower fall's of Royal's River, and bounded eighty rods on a town way. Samuel Merrill pleads possession in his own right. Jury trial; verdict for defendant.

Vol. 2, p. 169. April term, 1770. Enoch Harvey of North Yarmouth, yeoman, plaintiff, vs. Timothy Davis, of N. Yarmouth, joiner, defendant. In a plea of ejectment, referred by consent to referees, who established a line between the litigants, beginning on the north side of the road leading from North Yarmouth to Brunswick, eighteen rods north-easterly from the easterly corner of Davis' dwelling-house, and running to Lot No. 3 in the 120 acre division.

Vol. 2, p. 177. April term, 1770. Jonathan Greeley, mariner, of Boston, Eliphalet Greeley, mariner, of Falmouth, David Sturdivant, of North Yarmouth, yeoman, and Jane, his wife, plaintiffs, vs. Benjamin Bradbury, of North Yarmouth, husbandman, defendant. In a plea for trespass, for breaking and entering plaintiffs' close at North Yarmouth, containing fifty acres; beginning 225 rods north-east from the lower falls in Royal's River, being at the dividing line between said fifty acres and land belonging to heirs of Joseph Fellows, deceased. Jury trial; verdict for plaintiffs.

Vol. 2, p. 179. April term, 1770. Richard Stubbs, yeoman, Richard Stubbs, Jr., mariner, and Benjamin Stubbs, mariner, all of North Yarmouth, plaintiffs, vs. Joseph Blanchard, mariner, of North Yarmouth, defendant. In a plea of trespass. Dismissed from the docket.

Vol. 3, p. 542. May term, 1785. Richard Codman, Esq., of Falmouth, and Benjamin Mussey, of Pearsontown, gentleman, plaintiffs, vs. Caleb Bartlett, Melachi Bartlett, and John Cushman, yeomen, all of North Yarmouth, defendants. Defaulted.

Vol. 3, p. 558. October term, 1785. Daniel Drinkwater, mariner, of North Yarmouth, plaintiff, vs. Joseph Blanchard, yeoman, of North Yarmouth, defendant. In a plea of ejectment, to recover possession of between 35 and 40 acres, bounded southerly by said Joseph Blanchard, westerly by Lot No. 2, north by Nathaniel Blanchard, and easterly by Broad Cove. The land in question was devised in the will of Nathaniel Blanchard. Referred by consent to David Jones, Asa Lewis and William Cobb, who established and reported the dividing line. [This land seems to have been part of the Gendall farm.]

Vol. 4, p. 98. May term, 1786. Benjamin Shaw, of North Yarmouth, yeoman, plaintiff, vs. Nathaniel Merrill, of North Yarmouth, yeoman, defendant. In a case of trespass. Referred to Amos Harris, Benjamin Muggridge and Eliphalet Greele, who report in favor of the defendant.

Vol. 4, p. 99. May term, 1786. THE INDIANS.

[By N. T. TRUE, M. D.]

It is not probable that the Indians ever formed a distinct and permanent tribe within the limits of North Yarmouth. It was rather a place of resort for tribes at a distance, for the sake of fishing in the streams and coves, at the Falls, and among the islands. The extensive mud-flats abounded in clams (Mya arenaria), which evidently formed an important article of food, as may still be proved by the immense heaps left by them on the shores. The moose, bear, deer, muskrat, beaver and other animals, were abundant in the forests near by their rude wigwams.

The soil within the limits of the town was poorly adapted to their peculiar mode of cultivation, and it is doubtful if they ever raised any crops whatever. Their headquarters seem to have been on Lane's Island, at the mouth of Royall's River. Tradition marks this as the spot where they held their councils, tortured their captives, and where they lived a comparatively easy life, as may be judged from the debris accumulated from the clam-shells and other refuse matter. As the western part of the island was composed of sand, they made it their burial-place. Ever since they left this spot, skeletons have been occasionally found, which have been washed out of the banks by the encroachment of the waves.

Their stone implements have been found all over what was originally North Yarmouth. I once saw a fine scalping-knife found on a sand-hill in the south-eastern part of Pownal. It evidently came from the vicinity of Saugus, Mass., as it was composed of a peculiar kind of jasper, or rather felsite, found only in that locality. A few years ago a stone pipe of unusually good workmanship was found in Pownal. Iron hatchets of clumsy workmanship, made by the Canadian French, have been plowed up. Stone hatchets, axes, gouges, scrapers, sinkers and other objects, were quite common, and, if collected, would form a good museum.

INDIAN GEOGRAPHICAL NAMES.

These Indians, with others in western Maine, were called by those farther north and west. "Abnakies," or "Waubanakies,—a word derived from "wauban", white, or the east, and "ahki," land, corresponding with the English word "Eastlanders," or poetically, "People of the Morning." Farther east, they were called "Openangos" by the French, a word having the same origin and meaning as "Abnaki."

Casco, anciently Aucocisco. This word is said to mean a "crane." It applies to the beautiful bay, studded with its numerous islands, between Portland and Harpswell, and stretching along the shores of North Yarmouth. There is a tradition that the tribe of that name lived on the Presumpscot River, and it is not improbable that they extended their possessions to the Westcustogo River, though the fact that Robinhood had possession of the river would indicate that the Indians of North Yarmouth belonged to the Kennebec tribes.

The Indians left their language indelibly stamped on the most prominent natural objects which attracted their attention. Each of these words is a description of some natural feature. These names are quite numerous within the limits of North Yarmouth. It is almost impossible to unravel the meaning of all these words. Of some there is no doubt; while of others only a partial definition can be given. It is a part of the history of a town to preserve these names, and their definition as far as possible.

"Westgostogua," or Royall's River. This is the largest river in the town. So far as I have ascertained, the earliest mention of it was by Gov. Winthrop, in 1630. "Togua," or more commonly "tuck," is from an Abnaki word "tegooe," which is defined by Trumbull as "a stream that is moved by the wind or the tides." This was true of Westgostogua, because they applied the name to the tide-water below the Falls, and not above them. I cannot define the rest of the word with certainty, though "wesens" is closely allied to a word signifying "clear," which would make it "the clear tidal river."

It is spelled Wescustogo, Westecustogo, West Custigo, and abbreviated by the early settlers to Custigo and Custogo. It is also written Wesgostuggo, Wosgoostukett and Westgostuckett. The latter name may mean, "at the clear tidal river,"—"ett" being a locative preposition. Some writer unknown to me has spelled it Swegustagoe. This is quite interesting, because it indicates what may have been its true meaning and application. The root "sweg" is found in a great many words. Its primary meaning is "pouring forth," and is applied to the outlet of a river. Thus, Saco was written "Swagadahock," "the discharging place." I think that "Swegustagoe" signifies "the mouth of the tidal river," for they gave another name to the river just below the Falls. The whole river took its present name from [William] Royall, one of the earliest settlers. From a claim of Nathaniel Wallis, [see p. 220] 1672, there appears to have been a tract of land between Arisickett and Westgostuggo rivers, called "Wesgostukett. This was on the coast, in the south-western part of Freeport.

Pumgnissucke. This was the name given to Royall's River at the lower falls, in the original deed given by Robinhood to the first proprietors in 1673. It has more commonly been written Pungus-tuck, or Pungustue. In the latter form we find the last syllables having the same origin as the last two in Wesgustogua. I cannot satisfactorily define the first part of the word.

Sisquisic, Cousins' River. This name seems to be compounded of "asiskou," mud; "s," denoting nearness; and "ic," place. If this be a correct analysis, the word literally signifies "the river near the place where it is muddy." Any one acquainted with the locality would not for a moment dispute its application.

Presumpscot River, also written Pesumescot. (Bowen's Geog.). Porumpscot, Pesumsa and Pesumsca. Although this river did not run near North Yarmouth, yet it had one important tributary which passed through a portion of its limits. Its analysis as given by J. H. Trumbull is quite interesting. "Peske," divided; "ompac," upright; "pisk," a standing rock; "ot," a locative preposition, signifying at. We may then define it, "At the divided upright rock place." The name was evidently applied only to the lower falls, which was the most conspicuous place of the kind along the whole coast of western Maine, and most admirably describes the location.

Piscataquis River, a branch running through Cumberland, and discharging into the Presumpscot. "Peske," divided; "tnk," stream; "is," diminutive,—"the small divided stream." It probably received this name from its being the most important branch of the Presumpscot.

Harrasecket River. Harrisicket, and Harroseekit. "Et," is the locative preposition signifying at; "eek," place; "harra," I cannot define. It was also written Arisickett and Ariseekett.

Bungungamug River. (Jeffry's Map.) in Harpswell. This clumsy word is spelled quite elaborately, and is also sometimes judiciously abbreviated, as Bungonengamock, Bungomungamug, Bunquamgamook, Bunganoc, Bungamug, Burgomungomug and Burgomug. The final syllable, "ug," "og," "ock" and "ook," signified land, or place; "gom," or "gam," was usually applied by the eastern tribes of Maine, to a body of fresh water, as a lake, or pond. It may mean here simply water. I cannot define the other syllables. The early settlers rather delighted in the rhythmical name of Bungomungomug. The late Rev. Dr. Ballard, of Brunswick, derived it from a word signifying "high banks," which is true in point of fact.

Maquait Bay, between Harpswell and Brunswick. Also spelled Maquoit. (D. Neal, 1700.) In 1662, Boies and others built a fortification at Musequoite, (Kennebec Claims.) Mackquoit, (Niles' Register.) Muskequoit, Mussequoite (Jeffry's Map.) I cannot define the word.

Merryconeg. Gen. Edward Russell, in his Historical Address, writes it Menyceneag. If this be correct, it may be defined a peninsula.

Susquesong, Cousins' Island. I dare not define it, though it seems closely allied to Sisquisic.

Chebeag, Chebascodegar, Chebeaque, Chebeague and Gebeag. This is the largest of the group of islands in Casco Bay. I am in doubt in regard to its true meaning. Possibly it may be derived from "t'chi," great, and "begat, still water, with reference to the waters of Casco Bay.

Damaris Cove was probably named from Robinhood, whose Indian name, according to R. K. Sewall, was Damarine. It is spelled Demarine, Damarins, Damarills and Damarille's Cove. It was the extreme eastern limit of North Yarmouth. New Damaras Cove was the name of Bayley's Island, (General Edward Russell.) (249)

THE OLD GARRISON HOUSE.

"All houses wherein men have lived and died
Are haunted houses."

Yes, they are haunted; but no peaceful dead
Come here to walk these halls with ghostly tread,
And restless wander, 'mid the gath'ring gloom,
From floor to floor, each well-remembered room.

Yet well might all who cross this ancient door
The sound of footsteps note along the floor,
And clang of arms that ring upon the ground;
And hear, from yonder wood, the war-whoop sound;

Then sudden, borne from Callen, o'er the tide,
The cruel shot when gallant Gendall died;
And faint, from where yon low-browed island lies,
Come up the tortured captives' plaintive cries.

Or, when the dusky silence, full and deep,
Wraps round the world the gracious veil of sleep,
One wand'ring 'neath those elms that arch the way,
May list the whispered loves of olden day;

And catch, with startled ear, and wond'ring look,
The tramp of flying steed across the brook;
And dimly see some bold, belated swain*,
From savage foe, the shelt'ring fortress gain,

But, dawns the bright'ning morn of fuller day,
And sweeter sounds around these ruins play;—
The merry laugh of children on the shore,
And maiden's song from out the open door.

The olden dreams that cluster round it now,
Are all that haunt this gray old home, I trow!
The spectral forms of hopes and joys long fled:
And ghosts of loves that linger o'er the dead.

[*See page 189, OLD TIMES.]

Earth's phantom, fleeting pleasures fail at last;
 'Tis then we seek from out the storied past,
 The purer joys our youthful days once knew,
 And welcome thoughts whose presence erst we flew.

Yon jeweled bay; that hallowed plain we love;
 The well-known hill, with relic dear above,
 Whose granite altar oft our footsteps climb,
 All speak the language of the olden time.

Here, where these ancient elms their shadows cast,
 We stand within the witchery of the past;
 And yon gray walls, we greet with loving eye,
 Are eloquent with tales of days gone by.

Here, restless minds, on dreamland's magic ear,
 May find sweet rest from weary wand'rings far;
 Or, waking, wing the world with Fancy's flight,
 And soothe the soul with childhood's visions bright,

Oh, when I gaze upon this mansion old,
 And note Time's stern and unrelenting hold,
 My grieving soul its tribute tear-drop pays
 This dear memento of Ancestral days.

RUSSELL--PHILLIPS.

A NOTE UPON TITLE "PHILLIPS" IN APPENDIX TO "BOND'S GENEALOGIES OF WATERTOWN."

[Reprinted from NEW-ENGLAND HISTORICAL and GENEALOGICAL
 REGISTER for July, 1873.]

On page 879 of his great work, Mr. Bond has committed an error in regard to the grandchildren of Lydia (Phillips) Clark, misled, doubtless, by some incomplete family record. He gives as the only offspring of Hannah (Clark) Russell (the daughter of Dr. Parker Clark and Lydia Phillips Clark), one daughter, Hannah, born July 2, 1768, died May 3, 1851, aged 83 years. Whereas that Hannah, as appears by an entry of her great-grandmother, Hannah (White) Phillips, in her bible, now in possession of the writer hereof, died January 1, 1771. They had other children, as will be seen in the following account of the family.

I. DOCTOR EDWARD RUSSELL [No. 250, 1st Ch. Cat. No. Yarmouth, Me.] was born in Cambridge, 1736; H. C. 1759; studied for the ministry, and was "approbated" June 9, 1761, as a preacher, by the association of ministers then convened at Cambridge, but never accepted any pastoral charge, preferring the practice of medicine, for which profession he also prepared himself. He was married in Andover, July 23, 1767, by the Rev. Samuel Phillips, grandfather of the bride, to Hannah, [251, 1st Ch. Cat.] eldest daughter of Doctor Parker and Lydia (Phillips) Clark, born April 2, 1743. He settled in North Yarmouth, Maine, where he was a justice of the peace and quorum; commissioned, 1781, colonel of 2d regiment of militia of Cumberland County; led an active and useful life, and died April 19, 1785. His widow died Sept. 28, 1832, aged 89. Children:—

- 1 Hannah; b. July 20, 1768; d. Jan. 1, 1771.
- 2 Samuel Phillips; b. May 20, 1770; H. C. 1792; justice of the peace and colonel of militia; d. Sept. 19, 1803, unmarried.

He was much interested in the history of his town and state; prepared and delivered the address at the centennial celebration (1833) of the settlement of North Yarmouth [vide Maine Hist. Soc. Collections, 1st series, vol. ii., p. 165], and at the time of his death had commenced to arrange material for a full history of the town. He died in North Yarmouth, Nov. 23, 1835. Children:—

Notes and Queries.

TAX-LIST, 1759—These notes will only consider such names as have not been included in family histories hitherto published in this or any other like periodical. Under this head come the names of Cushing, Prince, Mitchell, Drinkwater and True. Neither will these memoranda touch upon the ancestry of those families whose genealogies are known to be in preparation for these pages. This exception will include the names of Buxton, Loring, York, Soule and Seales. The third and final exclusion refers to those families who have left the town, and will embrace the names of Ebenezer Mason, William Stevens and James Crocker. The object is to obtain original matter only for publication.

The families remaining whose ancestry will be traced, are as follows:—Brewer, Blanchard, Davis, Day, Delano, Eaton, Farrow, French, Hamilton, Humphrey, Hooper, Johnson, King, Lake, Lewis, Moulton, Nash, Oakes, Parker, Sturdivant, Stubbs, Sweetsir, Titeomb, Tuck, Tuttle, West and Wyman. Correspondence in relation to these families is cordially invited, and may be sent to the address of the author, Dr. Chas. E. Banks, 432 Congress St., Portland, Maine. (250)

SPEAKING TO THE DEACON—Three-quarters of a century ago, perhaps, two prominent members of the First Parish Church in North Yarmouth had so grievous a falling out that they ceased to be on speaking terms with each other. A peace-loving brother, meeting one of them on a certain occasion, remonstrated with him on such a condition of affairs: "It dont 'pear to me to be right, Brother W——, that you cant speak to the Deacon,—it aint christian-like." "Well," responded the other, meditatively, "I dont know but I will speak to him, next time I see him." Shortly after, meeting the said Deacon, who, by the way, was a man of exceedingly dark complexion, Brother W—— thus addressed him:—"Good morning Deacon H——; seems to me you look blacker than ever!" Concerning the harmony that doubtless followed fast upon so conciliatory a speech, the years, unfortunately, have brought us no record. He was born at Cambridge, educated at the University there, and received the first honors of the place in the year 1759. He has acted well on the stage of life as a preacher, a physician, a merchant, and a military officer. He was a firm, able and persevering friend to the liberties of his country. Taken away in the meridian of life, he has left a sorrowful widow and several children to lament their unspeakable loss, with whom the public has great reason to sympathize.

HISTORY OF CUMBERLAND
ROYAL ARCH CHAPTER, NO. 35,
YARMOUTH, MAINE.

[NICHOLAS DRINKWATER.]

Cumberland Royal Arch Chapter was organized in Yarmouth, on the 14th day of September, 1870, under a Dispensation granted to the petitioners by Most Excellent Grand High Priest, Stephen J. Young, empowering and authorizing them to form and open a Chapter of Royal Arch Masons on Wednesday evening, on or after the full moon, and therein to confer the degrees of Mark Master, Past Master, Most Excellent Master, and Royal Arch Mason, agreeable to the customs and usages of Ancient Free and Accepted Masonry, and the Ordinances and Regulations of the Grand Chapter of Maine, and of the Great Grand Royal Arch Chapter of the United States.

The names of the petitioners were, James J. Humphrey, Henry C. Greenleaf, John P. Carswell, James H. Doughty, and N. Melcher of Yarmouth; Joseph Smith, William Buxton and Samuel M. Brackett of Cumberland; William Y. Pomroy and Joseph S. Bailey of Portland; J. B. Pinkham of Freeport, and Thomas Holt of Skowhegan.

J. J. Humphrey was appointed the first High Priest; H. C. Greenleaf the first King; and J. P. Carswell the first Scribe.

At their first meeting, September 14th, 1870, they received applications from twenty-five Master Masons, nearly all of whom were members of Casco Lodge; and at the next meeting, Oct. 12, they were all elected for the several degrees within the gift of the Chapter, and the work of conferring the degrees commenced.

But the Hall which they were forced to occupy, (Institute building, used by Casco Lodge) being small and inconvenient, in fact wholly unsuitable for the work of the Chapter, an effort was made in the Fall of 1871, to procure a more suitable place of meeting.

50.00 (2 vols)

But as there was not that entire unanimity with regard to the location of the hall that should characterize a Masonic body, the better to preserve peace and harmony, all projects for building a hall separate from that of Casco Lodge were abandoned.

Late in the Fall of 1871, Casco Lodge commenced to erect the present Masonic Hall; which is a convenience, if not an ornament to the town; and a proposition was made by that body to Cumberland Chapter, that if the Chapter would incur one-half the expense, they should own an undivided half of the building.

This proposition was accepted by the Chapter; and the work of building progressed under the auspices of both bodies, until the "cap-stone was finished."

On the 28th of January, 1873, the Hall was solemnly dedicated to Free Masonry, to Virtue, and to Universal Benevolence; and at the same time Cumberland Royal Arch Chapter was duly constituted under a Charter from the Grand Chapter of Maine, by Grand High Priest John W. Ballou.

The officers elected and installed on that occasion, were as follows:—

Companion James J. Humphrey, High Priest.

“ Henry C. Greenleaf, King.

“ John P. Carswell, Scribe.

“ Frederick E. Mitchell, Captain of the Host.

“ Augustus H. Humphrey, Principal Sojourner.

“ Joseph Raynes, Royal Arch Captain.

“ Ansel L. Loring, Treasurer,

“ James M. Bates, Secretary.

The ceremonies were performed at the First Parish Church; after which the Chapter, with invited guests to the number of about three hundred, repaired to the new Masonic Hall, where a bountiful collation was provided.

The names of the petitioners for a Charter were as follows:—

Frederick E. Mitchell.

Edward J. Stubbs.

James H. Doughty.

Joseph W. Lawrence.

Daniel S. Moody,

Benjamin Chadsey.

William B. Skillings.

Cyrus F. Sargent.

Samuel Gooding.

Nicholas Drinkwater.

Hermon Seabury.

Ansel L. Loring.

Henry C. Greenleaf.

Richard Harding.

John T. Smith.

Thomas L. Curtis.

John P. Carswell.

Augustus H. Humphrey.

James M. Bates.

Benjamin Loring.

Richmond L. Storer.

George H. Chase.

George F. Tabor.

Joseph Raynes.

James J. Humphrey.

The Charter declared Cumberland Chapter No. 35 to take rank, date and precedence from the 7th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1870; and was dated May 8, 1872.

The signers of the Charter were, John W. Ballou, Grand High Priest; H. H. Burbank, Deputy Grand High Priest; Henry L. Paine, Grand King; Arlington B. Marston, Grand Scribe, and Ira Berry, Grand Secretary.

The by-laws designated the stated convocation in December as the annual one.

There were forty-three exalted under the Dispensation.

An Act of Incorporation was petitioned for, and passed the House of Representatives February 27, 1873, Edmund F. Webb, Speaker; it passed the Senate the same day, J. B. Foster, President; approved and signed February 27, 1873, by Sydney Perham, Governor, and certified by G. G. Stacy, Secretary-of-State.

A seal was procured for the use of the Chapter, bearing the coat-of-arms of Cumberland County, in addition to the Ark

There were thirteen exaltations during the year 1873; three members received by dimit, and two deaths. During 1874, ten were exalted, and one died. In 1875, three were exalted, one dimit, and one died. In 1876, none were exalted, two were dimit, and Past Excellent King Henry C. Greenleaf, and Most Excellent High Priest George F. Tabor were removed by death.

In the early part of the year 1877, the finances being rather low, and the Chapter being burdened with debt, it was thought that the general good of the craft would be promoted, and the prosperity of the Chapter enhanced by selling out to Casco Lodge the undivided interest of the Chapter in Masonic Hall. Arrangements were accordingly entered into which proved satisfactory to both bodies, and the Chapter's interest in the building was transferred to Casco Lodge April 9, 1877, and a lease taken of the Lodge for a term of ten years.

In 1877, there were two exalted. In 1878, two were exalted, two dimit, and three died.

At the annual convocation in December, 1878, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—

- Companion Lorenzo L. Shaw, M. E. High Priest.
- “ Hermon Seabury, E. King.
- “ Thomas L. Curtis, E. Scribe.
- “ John Smith, Captain of the Host.
- “ Augustus H. Humphrey, Principal Sojourner.
- “ Joseph Raynes, Royal Arch Captain.
- “ Richard Harding, Treasurer.
- “ James M. Bates, Secretary.

Since the organization of the Chapter, the following Companions have deceased:—Joseph R. Curtis, March 3, 1873; Elmer W. Randall, Dec. 20, 1873; George F. Creech, Sept. —, 1874;

Reuben Merrill, June 18, 1875; Henry C. Greenleaf, June 19, 1876; George F. Tabor, Oct. 10, 1876; William G. Allen, supposed to have foundered at sea, in the latter part of 1877; Emery H. Tuttle, in 1878, in California; Edwin W. Hill, Feb. 27, 1878; David C. Loring, April 1, 1878.

Cumberland Chapter is at present (Jan., 1879) composed of sixty-two members; thirty-nine of whom reside in Yarmouth; four in North Yarmouth; nine in Freeport; eight in Pownal; one in Rochester, N. H., and one in Chicago, Illinois.

The Chapter is now in a healthful and prosperous condition; free from debt; its Treasury replenished; and with a fair prospect of success and usefulness. (251)

In 1710, he was Town Treasurer.”

At North Yarmouth, he seems also to have taken much interest in the settlement and welfare of the town. He was one of the original members of the First Church, and was elected Deacon Feb. 16, 1730. At the first general Town-meeting, holden May 14, 1733, he was chosen Moderator.

56 John.

57 Samuel ; July 8, 1706 ; d. June 15, 1764. This was the Rev. Samuel Seabury who preached in the Old Church in North Yarmouth, in 1727-8. He afterwards became an Episcopalian, and preached at New London, Conn., some fifteen years, and then settled at Hampstead, Long Island, (New York), where he died. He had a son Samuel, who also became a clergyman, and preached at Westchester, New York, during the Revolution. He afterwards settled at New London, Conn., where he was chosen Bishop by the Episcopal Clergy of Rhode Island and Connecticut.

In a letter received from Rev. George L. Chase, A. M., Warden of the Divinity School of the Seabury Mission, situated at Fairbault, Minn., and named in memory of the first Bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, he says, "Bishop Seabury, (then Rev. Dr. Seabury), having been chosen for the office of Bishop by the Episcopal Clergy of Connecticut and Rhode Island in 1784, proceeded to England and sought consecration at the hands of the Archbishop of Canterbury. He was cordially received, but there was manifested an unwillingness to comply with the request, without the approval of the United States Congress. Whereupon Dr. Seabury, anticipating tedious delays before the impediment could be overcome, transferred his appeal to the Episcopal Church in Scotland, where he met with prompt success, and was consecrated Bishop by the Bishop of Aberdeen, Ross and Moray, on the 14th of November, 1784."

Bishop Seabury had a son Charles, also a clergyman, and settled, after his father's death, over the same Church, so that father, son and grandson have preached to the same congregation. Rev. William J. Seabury, D. D., Professor of Ecclesiastical Polity and Law in the General Theological Seminary, New York City, an institution of the Episcopal Church, is a descendant of the Bishop.

58 Nathaniel. Lived at Groton, Conn. He had one son, Nathaniel, who died at an early age, leaving one son, David, who served as a volunteer under Col. William Ledyard in the defence of Fort Griswold, when the traitor Arnold burned New London. After a brave resistance, the Fort was stormed by the English and Tories, (who were 800 strong, to only 160 of our men), and the gallant defenders ruthlessly slaughtered. His name, David Seabury, among others, is engraved on the monument erected on Groton Heights, to the memory of those noble men.

Elizabeth (Alden) Seabury, is the ancestor of the numerous family of Seaburys who have lived and are living at Yarmouth, Maine.

[WILLIAM M. SARGENT.]

JOHN WHITE.

Willis MSS. H. 43 :—The will of John { dated 9 Oct. 1747
White of North Yarmouth [138, 1st Ch. } proved 3 Apr. 1749
Cat.] bequeaths: to Rachel, his wife, £55, and all my household goods and the improvement of all my estate, both real and personal, until my eldest child, Asa White, comes to the age of twenty-one years. To my eldest child, Asa White, £100, when he shall arrive to age of 21 years. All the rest of my estate, both real and personal, to my children, namely, Asa, John & James, to be equally divided amongst them, each one to enter into possession as they severally arrive at the age of 21. Appoints his wife Executrix. Witnessed by Jonas Mason, Samuel Baker and Jonathan Bryant.

From a letter by Rev. David Shepley, in the Willis MSS., dated June 11, 1849: "I know nothing of Deacon John White prior to the time of his removing to North Yarmouth, except that he came from Weymouth, [Mass.], where he was a member of a church, and was married. He came with the ancestor of the Blanchard family, who was also from Weymouth.

I have seen business papers exchanged between White and Blanchard while they were both inhabitants of Weymouth. They came about 1743. White was chosen Deacon the same year he joined our church, and died in a little more than two years after.
He lived on what is now Cumberland Foreside, not far from the present Methodist meeting-house.

Deacon White, while in Weymouth, married Rachel Loring, daughter of John Loring of Hull, and sister of Rev. Nicholas Loring, our second minister. They had at least two children [see the will above.] The widow [139, 1st Ch. Cat.] of Deacon White was married to Samuel Denny, Esq., of (I think) Georgetown. I have seen papers of Samuel Denny, acting as guardian of White's children.

Mrs. White's first marriage I have from a record of her brother, Rev. Nicholas Loring; the second, to Mr. Denny, from both town and church records."

NATHANIEL WALLIS.

Willis MSS. H. 48. [See OLD TIMES, p. 220.] (From Beverly, Mass., Town and Church Records.) "Nathaniel Wallis, who was born in y^e County of Cornwall, in Grate Britton, and aged about 77 years, departed this life y^e eighteenth day annoque Domini 1709."

"Margaret Wallis, widow of Nathaniel Wallis, late of Beverly, aged about eighty-four years, departed this life on May y^e 14th annoque Domini 1711." She is styled "Mother Wallis," on the church records.

The will of Nathaniel Wallis, approved 1709, gives his sons Caleb and Joshua his farm of 309 acres in North Yarmouth, on Broad Cove; to his grandson John, son of John, his farm of 142 acres in Falmouth, on Baek Cove; and to his grandson Nathaniel Wallis his farm of 102 acres on the west side of passumseot (Precumpscot) river. He also had a daughter Mary Pike.

March 29, 1691 Mary Wallis, widow, administers on estate of her late husband, John Wallis, late of Casco. She and her son Josiah are bound as principals, and David Phippen as surety.

Caleb Wallis (above) died at Beverly, 1 Nov. 1714, aged about 47. Josiah Wallis (above) made his will at Gloucester, 31 Dec. 1739, being old and weak.

THE CHRISTIAN PILOT.

The following items relative to the "Christian Pilot," the only newspaper ever published in North Yarmouth, Maine, have been gathered from the sources indicated:—

Miss Phebe M. Buxton, Bethel, Maine, March 17, 1878, says she remembers the paper very well. Her father took it until it was merged in the "Banner" ["Gospel Banner," published then and now at Augusta, Maine.] She recollects the publication in it of some doggerel verses, found on the "elm tree" at the Corner, satirically warning the people of North Yarmouth against the inroads of Universalism. (204)

Rev. Zenas Thompson, Woodford's Corner, Deering, Me., May 2, 1878, says, "It was exclusively denominational, being devoted to the advocacy of the Universalist Faith. The paper was started in Portland, Maine, about 1833, and was edited by Rev. M——— Rayner, pastor of the Universalist Church in that city. In the summer of 1835, it was proposed to me, then living at Saccarappa, to move to North Yarmouth and take charge of the newly-organized Universalist parish in that village, and, as an inducement to do so, it was suggested by Capt. James C. Hill and his son [Alexander] Greenwood Hill that they would purchase the "Pilot" and put its management into my hands. This was accepted, and I moved to North Yarmouth, and the type, office-furniture, &c, were carried there, and the paper published one year,—1835-6.

Of course, everybody and everything bearing the name of Universalist in North Yarmouth at that time was regarded by most of the people as odious ; but the paper had a growing popularity and patronage, and promised to be a success, even in old North Yarmouth.

Young Hill decided to move to Missouri [Arkansas?], and wanted the funds he had invested in the paper, and it was sold to Rev. ——— Drew, of Augusta, and was united with the "Gospel Banner," published by him, and for some years the united paper was called "The Gospel Banner & Christian Pilot." The "Pilot" was quarto in size ; published weekly, at $1,00 per year.

Your grandfather, [A. W. Corliss'], Ebenezer Corliss, was a constant reader of the "Pilot," as were also Capt. ——— Drinkwater and Capt. ——— Sturdivant, both venerable citizens of the town. The last-named was excommunicated from the Methodist Church, Cumberland Foreside, on the following charges :—

1st : Attending Universalist meetings and supporting the same.

2d : Taking a Universalist paper called "The Christian Pilot," reading it himself and loaning it to others to read.

3d : Raising the church window, near his pew, in time of service, "to let off," as he said, "the superfluous heat from the pulpit."

At a church-meeting of five members,—four women and one man,—the above charges were acted upon, and Capt. S., who had built the church almost entirely from his own means, and who had paid two-thirds of the salary of the minister, was expelled from the fellowship of the church." (209)

Mrs. Abby C. Corliss, Yarmouth, Me., May 12, 1878, writes that Mrs. Abby Baker, [No. 29, p. 28, O. T.], widow of Capt. Jeremiah Baker, of Yarmouth, has a bound volume of the "Pilot." She also states that the paper was published in the old brick house near the "elm tree," Corner Village. (209)

Miss Augusta C. Davis, Yarmouth, Me., July 27, 1878, states that the "Pilot" was printed on paper manufactured in North Yarmouth. (4-227)

RELIGIOUS REVIVAL, 1791.

[Dr. CHARLES E. BANKS.]

Imperfect minutes of the Revival of Religion in North Yarmouth, 1791. Extracted chiefly from a Manuscript of Doctor Mitchell's ; by Rufus Anderson.

The first appearance of a revival was at Walnut Hill, on the 23^d of March, 1791, when M^r Gilman preached a discourse from, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." A serious solemnity then appeared to sit upon the countenance of the audience. After lecture the Rev^d M^r Gilman on his return called into a neighboring house where several of the hearers had stopped, with whom he conversed personally, pointedly and affectionately, upon the necessity of true religion.

This, in connexion with other means, was hopefully blessed : for all those persons with whom he then personally conversed became hopeful subjects of C^t. In the preceeding fall the three Deacons had been appointed by the C^h to go round and converse with all those who had gone no further than to own the baptismal covenant ; but they had in a great measure neglected this appointed duty until after the above mentioned lecture ; when they according to the desire of the c^h went and conversed with those of the baptismal covenant.

This prudent and wise effort of the c^h operated powerfully with other means in bringing many of those persons to consideration. On the first Wednesday of April a monthly meeting was held at Deacon Southworth's (a meeting which had been regularly held over 20 years.) To this meeting all those persons came with whom M^r Gilman conversed at Walnut Hill. After going through the regular exercises of the meeting, he conversed with each in a particular manner again. They in number seven or eight, appeared to be under deep conviction. Several professors began now to awake up and pray for the effusion of the Spirit.

By the middle of April a considerable number were under great concern, and one woman appeared to enjoy peace and light. Wonder and amazement began now to sit upon the minds of people thro' the town. Some railed and threw the shafts of ridicule while others rejoiced.

The attention however was called up, and frequent lectures were preached on the week [days?] One person here and another there are from time to time struck with the arrows of conviction. The house of God is crowded.

By the end of April, almost all on Walnut Hill road are seriously impressed : some are rejoicing in hope. By the middle of May, it is more general thro' the town. About the first of this month a day of fasting and prayer was kept for the outpouring of the Spirit.

The important inquiry for salvation is now pretty general. Some however, by and by are offended and turn back. Conference meetings began to be set up in the afternoon,—not in the evening, lest some should attend from bad motives and bring a reproach on a good work. In June, a weekly lecture, both at the meeting-house and at the Falls, (where was a place or house convenient for meeting), was set up.

Mr Gilman was indefatigable; either reading or preaching sermons four days in the week besides the Sabbath, conversing in private, &c. On the 24th of July, being Sacrament day, 20 persons were admitted to full communion. And on the next communion day 35 more were admitted. Almost every one seemed to be concerned & serious, so that it appeared as if all were going to renounce Satan and follow C^t.

Many were admitted from time to time, so that by the time the sacraments were over for the season, 92 persons were admitted into full communion with the c^h. The hopeful subjects of this good work were persons under thirty years of age, or not much above, except in a few instances: young people, married and unmarried: some, of the best families in town, & some that were not: some of education: some of the worst principles: some of the greatest worldlings: and some of the most notorious sinners and drunkards.

Among the married, a man and his wife were generally both seriously concerned at the same time. The means used by divine grace were: sometimes preaching the word, sometimes reading, sometimes religious conversation and advice, sometimes seeing others concerned, sometimes particular thoughts would strike the mind suddenly without any apparent outward cause, &c. &c.

The work was carried on with great calmness and deliberation. Some indeed were so affected as not to be able to attend to their business for some time. There were no instances of crying out or fainting, excepting once in the time of lecture a woman fell into a fainting hysteric fit. A boy also cried because of his sins, one sabbath day at noon while a sermon was read in a private house.

The good work appears from its happy effects, in that there are produced the good works and fruits of faith, repentance, humility, love, zeal, and the like. Although the principal harvest was in the summer of 1791, yet since that even, the grate gleanings of this town have been better than the first fruits of the neighboring towns. There has been here and there one coming from time to time until this winter, February, 1793. This however is to be observed, that the many who shared in the first principal harvest, as it is hoped: and who did not immediately join the c^h, have from time to time been admitted since: & that the number admitted to the c^h since March, 1791, until the end of 1792, is about one hundred and forty.

Societies for religious improvement: In one part of the town are three:—1st, A monthly one, of an old standing; 2dly, A fortnightly one, which is held alternately at two places,—this is the most public of any, & is frequented by all sorts of people that choose; 3dly, A more private one of young people, about 17 males in number, who have a covenant written that each member signs; this is open only to professors. In another part of the town are two societies, or rather two sorts of conferences :—1st, A fortnight one, that goes in rotation, as indeed they in general do ; 2dly, A fortnight one composed of young people, who do not choose to open the doors to any but known friends. And in another part of the town is a fortnight conference that goes in rotation.

In some of these meetings, they endeavor to have preaching as often as they can ; but if they have none they spend the time in singing, reading, praying and conversing.

No. Yarmouth, February 21st, 1793.

(4) John Drinkwater [347, 1st Ch. Cat.] married Mar. 4, 1761, 26 Susannah Brown [348, 1st Ch. Cat.] b. Mar. 21, 1743; d. Dec. 12, 1819.

Residence: Prince's Point, North Yarmouth Maine.

Occupation: Shipmaster. He was for many years captain of a coasting vessel, employed in carrying wood to Boston. He was a man of much energy and decision of character. It is related of him that, during the Revolutionary War, in returning to Casco Bay from one of his trips to the westward, he was chased by a small, armed British vessel, or rather a small "Pinque," which they had captured, and kept for her superior sailing qualities to intercept coasters. He was in charge of a good-sized schooner for those days, and had his elder sons with him. The cruiser fired a gun for him to heave to; but he heeded it not, and taking the helm, he told his boys to keep out of sight, and notwithstanding shots were fired after him, resolutely kept on his course. But the enemy's vessel being much the superior sailer, soon gained a position on his weather quarter, and when just in the act of boarding, he suddenly put his helm hard up and jibed over his mainsail, and as the heavy main-boom, impelled by a strong breeze, struck the Pinque's masts they were carried by the board, and the vessel left a wreck, and its crew the dupes of a Yankee trick.

At another time, he carried a load of wood to Boston and sold it, and took his pay in Continental money. He started for home, but the wind coming ahead, he made a harbor at Lynn. While there, he took his boots on shore and had them tapped, and when he settled the bill it took the whole proceeds of the cargo to pay it. This was not owing to the size of the boots, but to the great depreciation of the Continental currency.

The day for his marriage to Susannah Brown, was fixed for the 3d of March, 1761, and the guests assembled on that evening, but no bridegroom came. Some of the guests proposed to go after him, but the bride said "No, if he can't come of his own free will he need not come at all." However, he appeared the next day, and gave as the reason for his non-arrival the previous evening, that he was loading his vessel at Jebeag, and was fearful that if he did not stay by her and get her off he might lose the run to Boston, and thought some other time would do just as well to get married.

CORRECTION—On page 380, OLD TIMES, third line, after the word life, add, on October. W. M. S.

ELWELL—William Elwell, Jr., by his wife Elizabeth, had, William, b. 6 Sept. 1733; Elizabeth, 10 Dec. 1736; William, (again), 9 Jan. 1741; Paine, 8 Apr. 1744, and Henry Butler, 27 Mar. 1746.

I suppose that this family removed to North Yarmouth, Maine, whence Paine returned to Gloucester. He was therein stated to be probably a descendant of the first Isaac, but it seems certain now that he was not.

Perhaps the son William was the same who m. Anna Tarr in 1766, and had a son William born in August of that year.

William, brother of Paine, is said to have removed to North Yarmouth or Freeport soon after his marriage, and to have had a son William who was bred a mariner and was lost overboard in Casco Bay on his passage from the West Indies. W. M. S. (263)

To his son, Henry, he gives (in his will) his interest in North Yarmouth, Casco Bay, and a portion of his land in Gloucester. (This Henry was born 19 Feb. 1704, in Gloucester.)

LANE—James Lane. This settler in a deposition given in 1733, says he went with his father, James Lane, from Malden "to a place called North Yarmouth, in Casco Bay, about seventy five years since, and there lived till driven from thence by the Indians in the first war." Probably here a few years before 1701, when he had a grant. He brought five children with him to G., and had six born here afterwards. He died 24 Jan. 1738, aged 86. His wife, Dorcas, died 9 Feb. 1751, in her 93d year.

PECULIAR PEOPLE.

[Doctor N. T. TRUE.]

Every town has a certain number of peculiar people. In its early history, Pownal, Maine, certainly had its share. Among its residents after its incorporation into a town was:—

DODGE, THE BEGGAR.

Nobody in town knew where he came from. He came to Pownal probably not far from the year 1800. His great propensity seemed to be that of begging. He was, in fact, a professional beggar, and continued so through life. He wore old and ragged clothes, with bundles of rags around his ankles and on his hat. In later years when his children had grown up, and tried to dissuade him from his habits, he utterly refused to change them.

He had a strong love for tobacco, and begged it from every person he met. He called it "backy." I often met him when I was a young man, and, on a certain occasion, seeing him in the distance, thought I would have some fun with him. When he begged some "backy," I pretended, with a look of wonder, that I did not know what it was; he seemed much surprised that I didn't know what "backy" was, but he never afterwards importuned me for his favorite weed. People frequently would ask him for a piece of tobacco, but he never had any to give. He was not an intemperate man, and, I presume, never drank ardent spirits unless given to him.

He was an enormous eater. He would at certain times enter each house in a neighborhood consisting of ten or a dozen families, and eat everything placed before him. Bread and cheese were among his favorite articles of food, but he could never make them "come out even." He wanted a little more bread, or a little more cheese,—and if either was finally left, he would ask for it, and put it in his hat and carry it on his head, which the wicked boys of that day would sometimes steal from him, as he would always take off his hat when he entered a house, and frequently they would find tobacco wrapped in an old rag.

He was a peddler, in his way. It was not an uncommon thing for him to carry two or more bushels of un-shelled clams on his back for several miles, and peddle them out to the inhabitants. One wicked fellow of that day, positively asserted that he found him one hot summer day sitting in the shade of a log fence, asleep, with three bushels of clams on his shoulders. He was fond of trafficking, in a small way. Gathering from the woods a backload of hemlock boughs, he would carry them to North Yarmouth Corner, and sell them for making brooms. He would split wood for the potteries and take his pay in refuse pottery, which he bought very cheap, but would sell at the price of the best ware. He would carry an enormous load of milk-pans, cream-pots and other articles, in a huge bag, a distance of seven or eight miles, and deal them out as he found customers. His earthen milk-pans were so warped that they had the reputation of not being able to lie still. He was sharp in his dealings, though I believe he generally met his engagements. He never went to any public gatherings, nor mingled with the people, unless as a beggar or in search of work.

He married a daughter of Josiah Reed, who was one of the pioneers near the extreme south part of the town. She was, probably, the first white woman born in what is now Pownal. She was always neat in her person,—presenting a strange contrast with her husband, as he shaved but seldom, which was almost a crime in those days. They had two sons and three daughters. Insanity prevailed among the children. One son was a miser; he lived at home, unmarried, and at his death, some twenty-five hundred dollars were found tucked away about the house in all possible hiding-places. With possibly a single exception, his children are dead.

The old man spent his leisure time in bringing branches of trees from the neighboring woods, and cutting them up for fuel, which he would invariably pile up in cob-house-fashion. Sometimes nearly a dozen of these piles might be seen at once. He always appeared harmless,—so much so that; in spite of his forbidding appearance, females were not afraid of him as he entered their houses. So far as known, he was always kind in his family. He died of a cancer, at an advanced age, in Pownal, where he had always lived.

There was always a mystery hanging over his early history, which his neighbors failed to solve. The most common report was, that his real name was David Paine, and that he had killed a man, and ran away, and some one gave him the name of Dodge because he had “dodged” the law. I do not know that there were any grounds for such a report.

SIMON MAGUS.

There was another strange character who settled in town, probably near the close of the War of 1812. He went by the name of Simon Magus, and I am not aware that his real name or his origin were ever known in town. He was a hermit, and lived in a small building near the house of the late Ensign John Lawrence. In 1822, he moved onto land owned by Robert Royall, near Haskell's Mills, where he erected a large building. He kept for sale a hogs-head of New-England rum, a keg of tobacco, and, perhaps, a little West-India rum, and some salt fish. No greater curse ever appeared in the town. Scores of men became intemperate by the presence of such a shop in their midst.

He was an exceedingly corpulent man, and had a peculiarly lazy voice. His food seemed to consist largely of salt pork, which he fried in a skillet, which he probably used for his ablutions,—if he ever did wash himself. Some boiled potatoes, and bread of his own manufacture, constituted his regular bill-of-fare. Occasionally he would shoot and cook a robin for an extra dish.

A more repulsive-looking man than Magus could not well be found. He died, I think, about the year 1832.

TIMOTHY CROCKER.

Another problematical character, named Timothy Crocker, lived in town. I am not aware that his birth-place or early history were known in the town. He was a bachelor, and by trade a rough cobbler, and lived as a hermit till he was quite an old man. He was a complete mystery to all the boys in town. I think he never attended any public gathering on week-days, yet he was always very punctual at church on the Sabbath. He never turned to the right nor to the left as he approached, or left the church. In his swallow-tailed blue broadcloth coat and light-colored trowsers, with his shoulders erect, he marched in true military style, with a quick step, paying no attention to anyone he met. Seated in the gallery, as near the pulpit as possible, he pulled a skull-cap out of his pocket, which he carefully adjusted to his head, and sat as motionless as a statue through the long services of those days. It is said that, in his earlier years, he held some minor military office which gave rise to the military air which he always carried through life.

When quite advanced in years, to the surprise of everybody, he married a woman residing in the town. He went to the Rev. Mr. Chapin and asked him what his fee was for marrying people. On being told that the fee, according to law, was seven shillings and sixpence, he asked if he could not take his pay in "shoe-making." A pair of clumsily-made cow-hide shoes was the best he could do. Whether Mr. Chapin ever received his pay in that way, I do not know; but it furnished him with material for more than one hearty laugh after solemnizing the marriage.

JAMES McCORMICK.

Was an Irishman by birth. He was a soldier in the French and Indian War, and was present at the capture of Quebec. He also served in the Revolutionary War. He finally found his way to Pownal, where he spent the rest of his days, and there he died.

He was totally blind, and received a pension of $96.00 a year, and was cared for by the town. He was fond of rum and tobacco; the first-named being measured out to him three times a day, and the latter was used without stint of measure. His head was covered with a profusion of white hair, which gave him a most venerable appearance. He was exceedingly fond of relating his war-record, which his neighbors generally regarded as extravagantly drawn. I remember once hearing him relate the following story:—"We were encamped during the winter near Lake George. Holes were cut through the ice, and fish were caught. Some of these were left to freeze upon the ice, and when it grew warmer they began to squirm and show signs of life." This, so much doubted at that time, has since been found to be a scientific fact.

He died at a very advanced age. There was a story current among the people, that he killed a fellow-soldier, in a fray, during the Revolutionary War, and was condemned to be shot, but was pardoned by General Washington. [See page 63, OLD TIMES.]

RICHARD FITZ.

This was another character worthy of note. He was born in Freeport, and, in early life, followed the sea, chiefly in voyages to the West Indies. Leaving the sea, he bought one hundred acres of wild land in Pownal, on the Merrill Road, and built a house and barn directly opposite the house of Josiah Merrill, another pioneer. A sand dune, nearly one hundred feet high, ran through the whole length of his farm. He cleared this of wood, and raised crops of rye as long as it would produce anything, till, at last, much of it became a barren waste of drifting sands. He never married, but had his maiden sister, Mary, or "Polly," for a house-keeper. He was not very vigorous for a pioneer, and became very slack in all his farming operations. He carried most of his fire-wood, which, in his later years, consisted of old stumps and roots, from the rear of his buildings, on his shoulders. His greatest delight seemed to be to leave his work and go into some neighbor's field and tell stories, of which he had an abundant supply. No matter how strange a story one might relate, he was sure to have one to match it. He was very sensitive to an injury, whether real or imaginary, and consequently his prejudices were very strong.

He rarely ever left the neighborhood, except at military trainings, and at town-meetings, and, about once in five years, he went to Portland. For his library he had a large bible, a Methodist hymn-book and a novel on "Religious Courtship," of which he thought much, and which he loaned to anyone desirous of reading it. On one occasion he went into a bookstore in Portland, and taking up a book from the counter, he read, "Ladies' Accidence." Thinking it might be an entertaining and curious book which should describe the "accidents" of the ladies, he bought it,—a thing he probably had not done for forty years. What was his disgust on reaching home to find that it was an "English Grammar." He always enjoyed relating the circumstance to my father. He and his sister always gave the plural of house as "housen," and of mouse as "mousen," &c.

He had a brother, Samuel Fitz, a respectable farmer, living in Freeport, who raised a family of children, one of whom now lives near Davis' Landing, in Yarmouth.

JOHN JOHNSON.

I have but one more peculiar individual whom I will briefly notice. His name was John Johnson. He was a feeble-minded person, but could labor on a farm under the care of some person. He wore a black beard of an inch or more in length. His greatest delight seemed to be in watching the boys at their game of ball and other plays. On one occasion the boys had met at the regular "May Training," and were playing a certain game called "Fooling." John's little black eyes glistened with delight as he saw them in turn fooling each other. At last he broke out with the remark,—“You,-you c-cant f-fool m-me, I was b-bau (born) a fool.”

Such is a brief sketch of some of the characters that went to make up life in Pownal half a century ago. Other characters of equal interest might be drawn, but these will suffice for the present. Old residents of the town will still recognize the individuals here described, and, no doubt, could add many incidents to those here given. (357)

DERIVATION OF TITLES

IN

[WILLIAM M. SARGENT.]

The title to all land in the town originates thus : King James I., by royal letters patent, in April, 1606, granted to the Council of Plymouth (a company formed at Old Plymouth, in England,) all of this continent from 41° to 44° north latitude, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans. On the 3 Nov. 1620, this Company obtained a new patent from the King, with these changes in their boundaries : of all the territory from 40° to 48° north latitude, including the country from Philadelphia to the Bay of Chaleurs, which opens into the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

On the 10 Aug. 1622, the Council of Plymouth grant to Sir Ferdinando Gorges and Capt. John Mason, "all the lands situated between the Rivers Merrimac and Sagadahock, extending back to the great lakes and the River of Canada."

Gorges and Mason obtained a new patent from the King, and continued in their joint interest till 1634, when they made a division of their property, by the River Piscataqua, Gorges taking the eastern part and Mason the western ; and they each procured distinct patents from King Charles I. for their respective portions, which they afterwards preserved. Gorges patent bears date 3

Apr. 1639, and is the first paper recorded in York County records.

Gorges procured a confirmation of his part of the original grant from the King, with power to govern his Province. This gave him seignoral powers, which the Council of Plymouth could not have conferred; as was afterwards decided by the Chief Justices in Mason's case, who had omitted this precautionary measure.

In 1616, Sir Ferdinando Gorges sent over Richard Vines: in 1639, Sept. 2, he appointed him his Steward General and also a Councillor; and he was sworn in under it at the first Court ever held, on the 25 June, 1640, at Saco.

Vines, as agent of Gorges, sold certainly to John Cousins his island in North Yarmouth, in 1645; and again in 1643, to George Felt, the 2000 acres which he had purchased of John Phillips, the Welchman, as early as 1640; and again, possibly, to Richard Carter, Senior, John Holman and others of the earliest settlers; again certainly, Sir Ferdinando Gorges, by his agent and nephew, Thomas Gorges, sold to William Royall the 250 acres he bought 27 Mar. 1643, on the east side of the river; and again, possibly, to Richard Bray what he at first owned on the west side of the river, before he bought from Cousins on the east side and on his island; possibly to others, as I have said, for it must always remain a matter of profoundest regret that, there not being so early as this date any place for recording deeds, many of the older evidences of title were overlooked when the Registry was established and the practice of recording had become general.

Gorges had also granted to Joseph Phippen and others a township of five miles in width on each side of Westeustogo River; and, after the acquisition by Massachusetts of the Gorges title, and the quieting of the conflicting claims (as mentioned below), that grant was confirmed to them in 1680, and the settlers were incorporated as the eighth town in this State, under the name of North Yarmouth.

The conflicting claims I have alluded to, arose in this manner: In 1630, the Council of Plymouth granted to John Dy, and others, the Province of Ligonias, or the Plough Patent; land lying between Cape Porpoise and Cape Elizabeth, and extending forty miles from the coast. This was an infraction, in so far, of the grant to Gorges, but it will be noticed that it did not extend to North Yarmouth, and it is not until the unwarranted and preposterous extension thereof claimed by the Rigby party, as explained below, that this bears upon our history.

In 1631, in the summer, a company came over in the ship "Plough," to take possession and settle under that patent; but not being satisfied with the appearance of the country, the principal part of them continued on to Boston and Watertown, where they soon broke up and scattered. No further effective steps seem to have been taken for the occupation of this grant until 1643, when, at the instigation of George Cleeves, Col. Alexander Rigby purchased, as one account says, from the surviving proprietors of the Province of Ligoniam, or a part of them only (as subsequently appeared), that dormant title, and, under the circumstances, but a nominal interest, doubtless hoping, in the unsettled condition of home politics, to become enabled to oust Gorges, and turn his speculative interest into a tangible and valuable one.

In 1643, Cleeves received his commission as Deputy-Governor, from and under Rigby; and, soon after, exceeding the bounds of their patent, they set up a claim to all lands as far east as the Sagadahoc River, thus bringing North Yarmouth within their claim, although the express terms of that instrument should have precluded such an absurdity.

This gave rise to interminable disputes and strife between the Rigby and Gorges factions, that continued, every now and then breaking out afresh, and were never finally composed till both the claimants had either submitted to or sold out to Massachusetts.

In 1652, Massachusetts, upon a fresh reading of their patent, found that its interpretations would bear stretching, and so the Government of that Province set up a claim thereunder to all lands included within a line running due west and east through a point three miles north of the head of Merrimac River. This line terminated "at the sea-side where the line doth extend there lieth a grayish rock at high-water mark, cleft in the middle." [See "OLD TIMES," page 223.]

The inhabitants west and south of that line, submitted finally to Massachusetts in 1658; and I am inclined to think that some of those who, about this time moved down the bay to our town, did so to escape from that, to them, distasteful jurisdiction.

March 13, 1677, Ferdinando Gorges, the grandson who had inherited from Sir Ferdinando Gorges, the original patentee, sold all rights in the Province of Maine, expressly "excepting all leases, grants and conveyances made by the original Proprietor or his Agents engaged in planting the Province," for £1250 sterling, to John Usher, of Boston, a merchant, who was employed to negotiate the purchase by the Government of Massachusetts, and who immediately, on March 15, 1677, conveyed the same to the Government, thus finally bringing North Yarmouth under the authority of that Province, recognizing, however, and confirming by these exceptions the titles of the ancient grantees within our limits.

Whilst the Rigby faction were maintaining their pretensions, we have certain evidence that two at least of the earliest settlers, wise enough in their generation not to quarrel with the powers that were nearest at hand, bought other and additional tracts of land of them, for William Royall, 13 Apr. 1646, bought of Rigby, himself, 220 acres, lying between Wescustogo and Sisquisic [Consins'] Rivers; and John Consins, 21 Feb. 1650, bought several parcels of upland and marsh on the main land, on Sisquisic River, of Cleeves, acting as Rigby's agent,—so that they then held lands under both the Gorges and Rigby titles, and whichever should ultimately prevail, they would be sure of a part of their possessions.

The titles from 1680, are derived from the confirmation, the additional grant of unappropriated lands next to Falmouth, and the incorporation of the town, at this time, by Massachusetts, and the subsequent divisions among the proprietors.

The ancient titles of Cousins to his island and main land, Bray, Royall, Maine, Holman, Mosier, Blashfield, Stevens, Gendall and perhaps some others were respected by the new proprietors,—in fact these titles were better than that of the new-comers, by reason of their priority,—but no respect was paid to the Indians' deeds, and an attempt to assert titles under them led to the protracted lawsuits noticed in pp. 128-30, "OLD TIMES," finally terminated in favor of the validity of the Gorges title, under which the town claimed, and against the asserted Indian grants.

I cannot close this sketch without a passing notice of one of the most glaring bits of injustice ever perpetrated by the cupidity of men. This was the course pursued by the new-comers, by which the venerable George Felt was despoiled of his labors of a life-time and deprived of the large tract twice purchased by him, the second time from Gorges, on whom all of the titles depended. Instead of his right to his 2000 acres, a petty sop of a few small lots was finally, after long importunity, thrown to his heirs, instead of their rightful inheritance. This is made all the more noticeable because they did respect Walter Gendall's title to what he had purchased from this very same Felt. If the one title was good, so much the better should have been considered the one that had never been alienated. But then the one man was poor and old; and the other was rich and influential. "Quid non mortalia pectora cogis, Auri sacra fames." (359)

N. YARMOUTH & FALMOUTH SOCIAL LIBRARY.

[Miss PHEBE M. BUXTON.]

Early in the year 1813, several residents of the south-western part of North Yarmouth and the section of Falmouth adjoining, associated themselves for the purchase and use of a collection of books called by them the "NORTH YARMOUTH AND FALMOUTH SOCIAL LIBRARY." A meeting of those interested was held at the house of Rev. Martin Ruter, and a constitution was formed and signed. The following are the names of the signers:—

Ephraim Sturdivant.	Henry Moxcey.
Martin Ruter.	Andrews Blanchard.
Joseph Drinkwater.	William Buxton.
Joseph W. Collins.	Joseph York.
William York, Jr.	George Titecomb.

Enoch Jaques.

Subsequently, as appears by the Library Journal, nine other persons were admitted to the association, namely:—

John Underwood.	George Prince.
John Pittee.	Retair Drinkwater.
Samuel Pote.	Joseph Smith.
Daniel Roberts.	Greely Sturdivant.

William Prince.

The only officers chosen by the society were a librarian, and a director or directors, whose business it was to select additions to the library. Two dollars was the fee required for membership, and the assessment on the shares for the purchase of books was left to be determined at each annual meeting.

Some provisions in the constitution (there were no by-laws) read oddly by the (gas and kerosene) light of the present time. Here is the 11th article of this document:—

“Persons who shall abuse the books they take out shall be subject to forfeitures in the following manner, viz., for every drop of tallow, oil, or other grease on any of the leaves of a book, six cents; for every rent in a leaf, six cents per inch; and for tearing out a whole leaf, the price of the book.”

That this law was not a dead letter is manifest by the journal, wherein it appears that sundry members were fined, on the return of books, for drops of tallow on the same, a witness to the general use of home-made dips or moulds in their households.

The number of the members being so few, of course the library was small, for cheap books did not then abound. It was mostly composed of “solid,” standard works, and the members evidently expected to read without haste, for their regulations specify that octavos may be retained six weeks, and all smaller books four weeks. A list of the books is here given, showing that it included but few of transient value, and quite a number still considered needful to a good library.

Josephus' History, 3 vols.; McKenzie's Voyages, 2 vols.;

Clark's Travels; Life of Washington; History of Rome; History of Greece; History of England; Buchanan's Researches; Life of Cumberland; Mavor's Plutarch; Morse's Geography; Maury on Eloquence; Self-Knowledge; Saint's Rest; Redeemed Captive; Beauties of Hervey; Klopstock's Messiah, 2 vols.; Life of Commodore Preble; Heathen Deities; Hartley on Christianity; Dow's Opinion; Centaur not Fabulous; H. Adams's History of New-England; McEwin's Types; Rollins's Ancient History, 8 vols.; Robertson's Charles V., 2 vols.; French Revolution; Paley's Philosophy; Lives of the Poets; Wars of the Jews; Historical Dictionary; Modern Europe; Volney's Ruins, 2 vols.; Blair's Philosophy; Massachusetts Agricultural Journal, 2 vols.; Bigland's View of the World, 5 vols.; Jefferson's Notes on Virginia.

This library remained in existence about seven years. The proprietors found it inconvenient to attend to it, and in 1820 it was dissolved, and the books divided among the members.

Notes and Queries.

BI-CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY—Cannot some steps be taken towards a suitable recognition of the bi-centennial anniversary of the incorporation of old North Yarmouth as a town? Sept. 22, 1680, at Fort Loyal, Falmouth, President Thomas Danforth, by order of the Commissioners, issued the order declaring North Yarmouth a plantation. Will not the public-spirited people of Freeport, Pownal, Cumberland, Harpswell, Yarmouth, North Yarmouth and "Mare Point" unite on Sept. 22, 1880, in such a celebration as the day deserves? Who will move in the matter? Will not some influential citizen in each town named, bring the subject up at their next town-meeting? (361)

FALL OF GREATNESS—North Yarmouth was once the residence of an individual familiarly known as Lord T—, on account of his pomposity of speech and manner. On one occasion, he was about to address his fellow-citizens, using as a rostrum a crockery-crate, over which boards had been laid. The orator began his speech with great impressiveness,—"As George Washington was to these United States, so am I to this little town! At this supreme moment, the board coverings were quietly withdrawn and the eloquent gentleman suddenly and ignominiously disappeared from public view. A. C. D. (361)

A PROMISING PUPIL—Rev. Tristram Gilman, who was pastor of the First Church in North Yarmouth for about forty years, was in the habit of teaching the catechism to the younger members of his flock. Among them was a lad so hopelessly dull that he could never repeat an answer correctly, except by following on after the good man himself. On one occasion, the minister fairly lost his patience and exclaimed with some warmth,—“I declare, Joe, it does seem to me you never will learn anything.” Without the alteration of a single feature, the boy solemnly and slowly repeated,—“I declare, Joe, it does seem to me you never will learn anything!” Tradition says nothing of any further ministerial attempts for poor Joe’s enlightenment. WINSLOW—Dr. Gilbert Winslow was in Falmouth as early as 1717, perhaps before, and lived on the Purpoodic side of the harbor, in the only house erected there at that time. He afterward removed to North Yarmouth, where he built a mill in 1720. Smith & Deane’s Journal, pp. 57-8. (361) C. E. B.

CURIOSITY—It is generally known that many a rare and valuable book finds a place upon the well-stocked shelves in the bookstore of the Colby Brothers, on Exchange Street, and that a number of our citizens are indebted to these collections for works of great worth, not only as souvenirs of other centuries but also from their own intrinsic merit. Yesterday, our reporter in looking over one of these omnium gatherums, so to speak, found the report of the Assessors of North Yarmouth, made for the year 1733. The work is in manuscript form, neatly bound in leather, the cover fastening with a strap and loop of the same material. The writing is still perfectly legible, and must have been a fine specimen of chirography. The names of the Assessors are Silas [?] Drinkwater and Asa Lewis. As stated in the fly-leaves, the book contains a list of part of the “State, County and Town taxes of North Yarmouth, for the year 1733.”

The taxes are given in pounds, [shillings] and pence, and many of the names recorded are those borne by our citizens to-day. Among them are Waite, Rieker, Sawyer, Staples, Chase, Foster, Elwell, Milliken, Morrill, Baker, Davis, Thomas, Storer, Winslow, Ring (probably the ancestor of Orrin), Loring, Hayes, Harris, Bailey, Brown, True and Walker. The whole sum reported by the Assessors for collection is £490, 15, of which amount £72, 7 is to be paid to Thomas Davis, Esq., “Treasurer and Receiver-General of this Commonwealth”; £17, 10, to Capt. Joseph McLellan, “Treasurer of said County”; and £400, 18, to John Gray, “Treasurer of this Town.”

This work is now the property of Charles A. Thoits, of this city. Eastern Argus, Feb. 16, 1878. (361) W. M. S.

THE

[Dr. CHARLES E. BANKS.]

The personal and family history of the early settlers in Casco Bay will always be a mixture of doubt and conjecture with the antiquary who shall, for biographical purposes, attempt to construct a finished story of their lives and actions. The legacy of recorded material that remains for the historian is a meagre bequest, like unto that clause in the impecunious burgomaster's will, in which he bequeathed a certain sum of money to a friend,—provided he could find it in the estate. So the ear-marks left on the leaves of Time by the Old Planters of Westcustogo are so few that the chronicler is reduced to the extremity, at times, of putting two and two together and calling it five, trusting in Providence for the stray numeral. These eager and undaunted pioneers came to an impenetrable wilderness.—

"As untenanted by man
As a castle under ban
By a doom."—

where the details of social and municipal government were allowed to work out their own salvation, with such result as we shall see.

The settlers, engrossed in the long labor of clearing the forests and improving their lands, were separated by long distances, and it is a question whether they rejoiced in the paraphernalia of town officers, or record-books.—except such as pertained to property grants. They emigrated hither from different sections of Massachusetts Bay, with families whose births were recorded in native towns, and neglected to have their deeds, wills and administrations properly entered in the Register's office, at York, the shire-town of the Province, the journey to which was desolate and dangerous. Thus, such transactions being adjudicated by local magistrates, whose papers have long since gone the way of all perishable matter, the task of compilation of facts about the early settlers becomes a Yankee transaction of guess-work. Add to this the inevitable confusion attendant upon the two devastations which destroyed the town in 1676 and 1688, when the iconoclastic red-skins wiped out of existence, and memory too, as with a sponge, whole families, and the casual reader will begin to appreciate the situation.

Often-times the settlers were born or married in Massachusetts, had children here, were driven there, had children again in the next place, died in a fourth, and the wearied biographer curses in a fifth, as he writes "perhaps" and "probably" and "about," in token of his ignorance. However, to relieve the reader of these sketches of the thought that they are the figment of a huge system of supposition, it may be stated that the scanty facts subjoined can all be substantiated. The few that have been obtained, rest on the indisputable foundation of legal documents; and while they may be scarce, yet we must feel thankful that there has been left to us some record of the early inhabitants of Westcustogo.

In the general loss of records of all the towns, during the Indian troubles, the County Records remained intact, and it is from these mainly that I have been able to gather all that is known of the old town.

THOMAS REDING: Came from Saco, with wife Eleanor, to Casco Bay, early, "and was the reputed owner of a certain tract * * * at Reding's Creek, * * * and lived on said land many years, and died seized thereof more than fifty years ago," according to the testimony of John Lane, in 1727, who was a neighbor of Reding for a long time. He had a son John, born 1660, who lived in Weymouth, and died in Gloucester 17 Nov. 1716, aged 56, and two daughters, who married, one, John Taylor, and the other, Henry Donnell.

JOHN LANE: This settler states, in a deposition, 1733, that he went with his father, James Lane, from Malden, "to a place since called North Yarmouth, in Casco Bay, about 75 years since (1658) and there lived till driven from thence by the Indians in the first war." His father was a land-holder in Falmouth, and brought his son, then but six years of age, to the ancient Westcustogo, where he acquired by purchase, or improvement, when he arrived at maturity, a large possession of property in various situations. Among his landed estate may be mentioned, 60 acres near Little River, 60 acres at Sandy Point, and two islands,—Reding's and Mosier's. The family probably came from Edstone or Welbourne, near Kirby Morrside, East Riding of Yorkshire. After the Indian wars the family lived in Gloucester, Mass. John Lane was born in 1652; married Dorcas, daughter of John Wallis of Falmouth, and died 24 Jan. 1738. She died 9 Feb. 1751, aged 93 years.

NATHANIEL WALLIS: A native of County Cornwall, England, born about 1632, owned and improved an extensive property of more than five hundred acres "in and about Cascoe Baye," three hundred of which was at Broad Cove. By his wife Margaret he had three sons, Caleb, Joshua and John, the first two receiving by will his land in North Yarmouth. John married Mary, daughter of John Shepherd, and died 23 Sept. 1690, the widow administering on the estate, with David Phippen as surety. Nathaniel Wallis "departed this life on October y^e eighteenth day Annoque Domini 1709, aged about 77 years," and his wife died 14 May 1711, aged about 84 years.

PETER HICKS: Of Dorchester, probably a son of Samuel and Hannah (Evans) Hicks, of Dorchester, and married, perhaps, Sarah (Clapp) Mather, the young widow of Joseph Mather. He removed to South Carolina, to found a place in that State, called Dorchester. He lived on Harrisickett or Hicks' Island, which he sold to John and Elija Danforth.

EDWARD CREEK: Of Boston, member of the Artillery Company in 1674, and an Ensign in King Philip's War, and at the fight on the Connecticut River with Turner's Company. As Lieutenant he had charge of a squad of men at Wells, in 1676, and was subsequently taken captive. He purchased 200 acres of upland, and 5 acres of marsh at a place known as "Barberry Marsh," 2 Aug. 1678, which he afterwards sold to Samuel Conable.

SAMUEL CONABLE: Of Boston, son of John and Martha (—) Conable. His father was a soldier of Turner's Company, at the Falls fight, in March, 1676, and died 10 April 1724, aged 75 yrs. Samuel was a joiner. He married, first, in 1710, Abigail Treadway, who died 6 April 1713, and, second, Mary Diamond. He had a share of land in Bernardston, granted in 1736 for his portion of the reward to those who participated in the bloody fight with Turner. In 1713, he sold his North Yarmouth possessions to Thomas Wharton and Samuel Tibbs, who appear among the Eastern Claimants.

HENRY COOMBS: Of York, probably the son of Henry Coombs of Marblehead who died in 1669, a supposition that is strengthened by the fact that Mary, the sister of our settler, married, 17 March 1670, John Ingersoll of Marblehead. He was born about 1645. He married Sarah, youngest child of Abraham and Judith (Tilden) Preble, of York, born about 1659, by whom, previous to marriage, he had an illegitimate child. His land in North Yarmouth was a grant of about 15 acres, laid out by surveyors under the direction of the Trustees of the town, 15 Nov. 1685, and confirmed 2 June 1686; this land he sold, 1 Dec. 1721, to Richard Shute, of Boston. In his will, dated 29 Jan. 1723, he makes his wife Executrix, devises property to "my cousin, Samuel Ingerson, of Marblehead," and to the church at York. He died 10 Feb. 1725, and his wife 25 Oct. 1724. He was a constable of the town in 1688.

ENOCH WISWELL: Born in England about 1633, the son of Thomas and Elizabeth Wiswell. His father settled at Dorchester in 1635; removed to Cambridge, and was Selectman in 1642, '44, '52, and Ruling Elder in 1664. His brother was the noted minister at Pemaquid, Rev. Ichabod Wiswell. Our inhabitant was a tanner by occupation. He married, 25 Nov. 1657, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Newgate) Oliver, born 28 Mar. 1640. He purchased of Joseph Nash, 25 June 1687, 300 acres at Harrisickett River, with dwelling and barn. This property he sold 8 July 1698, to Nathaniel and Gilbert Winslow, of Marshfield. He died 28 Nov. 1706; his widow, Elizabeth, 31 May 1712.

RICHARD BRAY: The first appearance of this planter was 3 Feb. 1650, when he bought of John Cousins one-half of his island and several other parcels of land which may be noted in the early transfers. Savage says he was of Dover, 1657, Casco, 1658, and probably of Boston, 1687, as gunner's mate. In 1670, he describes himself as "of Boston, formerly of Cascoe Bay," when he sells to George Pearson some of the property which he acquired by purchase from Cousins. By his wife Rebecca, he had at least three children,—John and Nathaniel, who were killed by the Indians in 1676, while attempting to rescue their cattle, and Hannah, who married ——— Hazeltine. One of the sons married Mary, daughter of Henry and Mary Sayward.

GEORGE PEARSON: From Boston, where he married Elizabeth, daughter of the celebrated Rev. John Wheelwright, by whom he had, Joseph, born 18 Aug. 1667; Wheelwright, 10 Apr. 1674, in Boston, and Thomas, probably born in North Yarmouth. He purchased of Richard Bray, in 1670, "one halfe of Cousins' his upland and long upland," which his son Thomas sold to Timothy Thornton, in 1716. He was associated with Lieutenant Anthony Brackett and George Ingersoll, Senior, in 1681, as a committee on re-settlement of the town.

ALEXANDER THWAITE: Of Concord. He embarked in the "Hopewell," from London, in 1635, aged 20 years. He swore allegiance to King Charles II. in 1665, to the eastward. Nothing is known of him, except the mention in the "Book of Eastern Claims" that he once lived at Maquoit.

HUGH MOSIER: Of Casco, 1640, being one of the earlier settlers in the bay, where he owned and improved two islands, now in Freeport, called Great and Little Mosier's.—now corrupted into "Moges." Savage says he may be the one who came in the Ship "James," from London, and arrived at Boston 12 June 1632. He was a grantee from George Cleeves of land in Falmouth 29 Sept.

1638, and two years later was a juryman at Saco. R. Williams, of Saco, who died in 1635, owed Hugh Mosier £115, as per account settled at court. He died in 1666, leaving two sons, James, the elder, and John; the latter administering upon his father's estate 26 July 1666. The sons sold their islands to John Lane, 166*, [vide Eastern Claims, p. 219, "OLD TIMES"] and John sold 300 acres on Harrisickett River to Joseph Nash, of Boston.

WILLIAM HAYNES: Probably from Salem, the son of William and Sarah (Ingersoll) Haynes, whose maternal relatives resided in Falmouth in the fourth quarter of the seventeenth century. Thither migrated William, and in that town was employed as a schoolmaster till he fled to Lynn on the outbreak of the Indian wars. He afterwards resided in Portsmouth, and finally in Newbury, where he died in 1702. He married, before 1674, Margery, daughter of Nicholas and Margery White, by whom he had "Several children born in y^e s^d place [North Yarmouth]; the s^d claimer being one of them." This last appears in the Book of Eastern Claims, in the testimony of their son Francis, who sued for the ancestral lands at Pine Point and Bustian's Island, which his father had improved for many years.

JOHN HOLMAN: Born at Dorchester, Mass., 23 Feb. 1638, the son of John and Ann Holman. His father arrived in Dorchester in 1632, from England, and was a Selectman in 1636, an Ensign in 1637, and in the Artillery Company in 1638. His mother died when he was but two years old. He came to Westcustogo about 1670, and purchased land of John Plaice. By his wife Elizabeth, he had a daughter who married ——— Cook, of Roxbury, and their child Eliza claimed her grandfather's right, as only heir, in the final division at the third settlement of the town [vide p. 51. Proprietors' Records, 1727, to be published hereafter.]

JOSEPH HARRIS: Born at Charlestown, Mass., 17 Nov. 1665, the son of John and Amy (Hills) Harris, and was admitted to the church 4 April 1714. He married, first, Naomi Stevens, about 1688, probably in North Yarmouth, to which place he removed in 1685. By this wife he had three children, all born in the old town, viz: Joseph, 4 Aug. 1689; Jonathan, 2 Dec. 1690; Amos, 19 Aug. 1693. Naomi died 16 Dec. 1710, aged 55, and he married for a second wife, 16 April 1724, Rebecca, daughter of Samuel and Hannah (Kidder) Kettell. Amos, born 19 Aug. 1693, was a weaver. He married, 8 Nov. 1722, Hannah, daughter of Stephen and Margaret Larrabee, who was born — — —. Their children were, Amos, born 4 Aug. 1723, and Hannah, born 11 Sept. 1727. This notice makes some important additions to the remarks on the Harris Family in "Notes on Tax-List of 1759," on p. 344, "OLD TIMES." Thomas Harris, a brother to Joseph, was born at Charlestown, 18 March 1664.

JOHN CROADE: This name, which is mis-spelled in the "Book of Eastern Claims" [vide p. 216, "OLD TIMES"], belongs to a Salem man, born 14 June 1663, the son of John and Elizabeth (Price) Croade. He came to North Yarmouth about 1700 and purchased 300 acres of Nathaniel Wallis, 12 May 1701. His mother, after the death of her husband, married John Ruck, which probably accounts for the appearance of that person in the town. Croade married, 1 Dec. 1692, Deborah, daughter of Nathaniel and Deborah (Jacob) Thomas, whose brother William must be the one mentioned in "Eastern Claims," p. 218, "OLD TIMES."

AMOS STEVENS: A Boston mariner, whose antecedents are unknown to us at present, bought 15 acres of land of John Royal, on "the neck," in 1682, and afterwards married a daughter of Wm. Royal, son of the pioneer. Not much remains to be said of him, except that he died before 1700, and his heirs claimed the above purchase.

HENRY DONNELL: From York, Me., the son of Henry Donnell by his wife, who was a daughter of Thomas and Elinor Reding. His father owned Jewell's Island, which he had occupied as a fishing-stage for about 30 years. His brother Samuel, who was born in 1645, was a distinguished man in the Province, being a Councilor, Justice of the Peace and Judge of the Inferior Court. This name is erroneously printed Daniell on p. 219, "OLD TIMES."

THOMAS HAYNES: This settler, who, according to the York County Court Records, was chosen Clerk of the Band in Westcustogo in 1667, purchased of Richard Potts, a fisherman of Damarascove, 20 April 1675, about 200 acres of upland at Barberry Marsh, at Maquoit. Nothing further is known of him or his family, except the record in the Registry of Deeds, 2 Aug. 1678, when this same "Thomas Haynes and Joyce his wife, once of Maquoit, now of Lynn," sells his estate to Edward Creek, of Boston. Savage says that a widow of Thomas Haynes married Samuel Bucknam; but whether the two persons are the ones who were of our town is an interesting question.

NICHOLAS COLE: The subject of this notice was probably the son of William Cole, of Kennebunkport, from which town he removed to North Yarmouth. He lived at the meadows, on Great Island, near Great Chebeague, owning and occupying a house some time previous to 1672, when he decided to re-enforce his squatter's claim by a purchase from the Indian Sagamores. He owned this property in common with John Purington, but fled to his native town, Wells, in 1676, when the Indian war began, and never returned, dying ten years afterwards. He was a carpenter and wheelwright, two useful trades in those days, and occasionally surveyed lands, which is a good demonstration of his beneficial power in any community where he chose to reside.

GEORGE FELT: It is needless to speak at length of this pioneer, whose advent in Broad Cove, about 1640, may be said to be the birth-day of North Yarmouth. So much has been said about him that is incorrect, that I purpose to leave extended comments to another whose true antiquarian zeal has brought to light many facts relative to George Felt and his family, which will have the merit of truth.

He was in Charlestown. on the Malden side, as early as 1633, when he married Elizabeth, daughter of Widow Prudence Wilkin-son. By her he had three sons and two daughters,—Elizabeth, George and Mary, baptized 26 Jan. 1640; Moses, born 20 Dec. 1641; and Aaron, whose age and history is a blank at present. Elizabeth married, in 1655, William Larrabee, and thus became the maternal ancestor of all of that name in the country. George married Hannah Andrews. Mary married, in 1660, Jas. Nichols. The marriage of the other two sons has not yet been ascertained. George Felt became the nucleus of a thriving settlement, for the marriage of his daughter to Larrabee brought down to Westcustogo a number of allied families, that resembled, in a small degree, the famous "Exeter Combination." George Felt died 1693, aged 92 years.

WILLIAM LARRABEE: This settler, the first of his name in this country, married, as has been stated, Elizabeth Felt, and followed his father-in-law to Westcustogo. It is my intention to compile a short family history of this planter, for "OLD TIMES," and I will only stop to note that he was killed by the Indians in 1689 with his son Isaac, leaving William, Samuel, Thomas, Stephen, Benjamin, and perhaps others, who have a large posterity.

JOHN PURINGTON, alias PROVENDER: There seems to be considerable confusion about the person who bought lands of the Indians with Nicholas Cole. Book 12, p. 7, 26 Nov. 1672, York County Registry of Deeds, describes him as "John Purington," but in Book 10, p. 30, the son of Nicholas Cole calls him "Provender." I incline to the belief that Purington is correct, as there was a family of that name in Wells, where Cole lived. A John Provender was in Charlestown in 1674, and took the oath of fidelity.

P.S. In the "Book of Eastern Claims," he is called "James Purington," who purchased land with Nicholas Cole, 26 Nov. 1672, and, still more. Book 12, p. 248, Isaac Provender, of York, sells, in 1727, a piece of land allotted to the heirs of his "late father, John Provender." The confused reader can now take his choice.

THE OLD CHURCH.

[WILLIAM M. SARGENT.]

By the indefatigable industry of Mr. William M. Sargent, the readers of "OLD TIMES" are at last presented with a correct plan of the "Old Meeting-house below the Ledge," at North Yarmouth, Maine. Although evidently not intended for publication with the article, the following extracts are given from Mr. Sargent's letter of transmittal, as they give, in a few words, all the old and new matter bearing upon the subject.

To avoid needless repetitions, and to economise space, the plans are consolidated in the accompanying diagram and all the pews, &c., numbered consecutively without regard to previous numbers, but by reference to the table on page 455, where all the different explanatory signs are conveniently grouped, no difficulty will be experienced in understanding the subject.

"I have always felt convinced that there were very considerable errors in your church diagrams, and also in the list of pew-occupants, and I have of late been turning my attention to it. Of course I have no recollection of the building, and so, of course no prejudice to overcome, but have derived all my information from documentary evidence. I inclose to you the result of my labors, viz:—

I. A tracing from the Town Records of the plan of the church as given in 1762.

II. A list of the purchasers of the twenty-eight new ("or equivalent") pews.

III. The original 1739 drawing of pew-rights.

IV. A copy of the tracing (I.) above, whereon I have placed three sets of figures,—the twenty-eight pews that were sold in 1762, in black pencil; the figures as given on p. 177, "OLD TIMES," in black ink; the original twenty-seven pews in 1739, in red ink.

V. Some corrections of your list as printed on p. 177, "OLD TIMES," and as corrected by Mr. Nicholas Drinkwater on p. 316.

Now for some of my reasons for my corrections: On comparing my tracing with your diagram on p. 177, you will notice these facts: Pews marked 2, 6, & 21, in pencil, [77, 13 & 2, on new plan with this article], which were actual pews, are passed over and not numbered, while spaces marked 36 [16], and 49 [15], in ink, which were not pews but were spaces under the stairs leading to the galleries, are added to the numbering. Also 1 [50], 2 [49], 5 [40], 6 [39], 9 [32], 10 [31], 18 [51], 19 [52], 22 [41], 23 [42], 26 [33], and 27 [34], 12 benches, are marked as pews in your diagram and added to the numbering,—while as a matter of fact, till 1762 at any rate, they were only “benches” for old people and children. Summary: to 66 pews, as numbered in your diagram, add 3 pews not numbered, less 2 spaces not numbered, equals 67 pews, instead of 66, as given; to 27 original pews, add 28 new ones, which gives a total of 55 in 1762, to which add 12 additional built in Mr. Gilman’s time (?), gives 67 again.

One error in your diagram was in continuing the end aisles to the wall,—which evidently would only have wasted room, and my tracing shows that it was not the fact.

My numbering of the twenty-seven original pews is set out with great particularity in the Records. It is expressly declared that the numbers begin at the east side of the pulpit and so ran all around the walls, and then began at the west end of the detached pews and ran east.

My idea of the way the church was enlarged is that both ends were moved,—the center remaining as it was,—and the new parts built in. If you will notice where I have drawn blue dotted lines to illustrate this [shown in new diagram by rows of apostrophes], you will observe that if the parts included are cut out and the remaining parts joined together, you will get not only the original twenty-seven pews in compact shape, but owing to the projections of pews 19 [65], 15 [1], and 8 [14], in red ink, and part of 2 [77], in pencil, added to the space adjoining the benches, you will get the proper width of the original side-aisles.

One more point: You will notice that out of the original twenty-seven pews, all but seven of the owners held on to their pews as they had acquired them by purchase from the holders of the first sittings therein; but these seven, viz: Nos. 4 [78], 5 [55], 6 [45], 20 [69], 19 [65], 18 [56], and 15 [1], in red ink,—seven in all exchanged; and there were just seven, viz: Nos. 62 [75], 20 [53], 24 [43], 16 [19], 7 [38], 3 [48], and 55 [67], in black ink, of the pews that were not sold, being the “new Pews that the Possessors of the old Pews took in the Room of them,” as is expressly stated to have been the fact on the tracing (I.)

Sheet III. will explain the use of the original numbers in a deed of a pew, (including the original rights), as shown by the deed of Noah Mitchell, as printed on page 372, “OLD TIMES.”

That marked (6), is the signature of Joseph Weare, (No. 41), at the age of 15: that marked (7), is his signature at the age of 23; both obtained from original documents.

All the members of this family have always and invariably spelled their names WEARE, and any variations of it have been recorded through the ignorance or carelessness of others. A reference to the coat-of-arms used by them in 1698, and a consultation of "Burke's Armory," leads to the inevitable conclusion that this family was of English origin, and not of Scottish, as might be inferred from the article printed in the "Genealogical Register," Vol. 25, p. 246. An English writer says the name was formerly DeVere⁽¹⁾, but this perhaps needs further confirmation.

The first of this family in this country, according to record, was 1 NATHANIEL WEARE, an early proprietor of Newbury, Massachusetts, where his name is of frequent occurrence in the town records early in 1638, and for twenty years afterwards⁽²⁾. He removed, probably as early as 1659, to Nantucket, in which he was interested as a purchaser, and died there March 1, 1680-1, (Gen. Reg., Vol. 7, p. 182.)

His children were, by his wife Sarah _____,—

2 Esther⁽³⁾ (or Hester); b. 1629(?); m., 1st, Benjamin Sweet, 1 Nov. 1647⁽³⁾, and had by him 11 children; m., 2d, Steven Greenleaf.

3 Nathaniel⁽³⁾; b. about 1631, in England. (See below after No. 8)

The above were certainly his children, as is abundantly proven by various records. It is thought by excellent authority that he had also the following children:

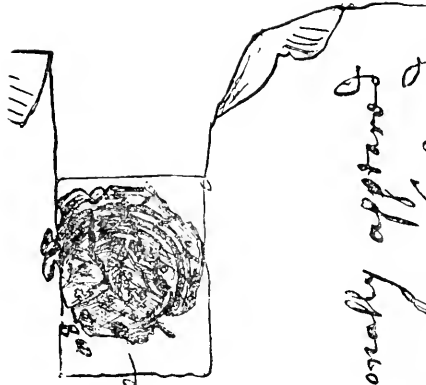

4 Robert.

5 Daniel.

6 Peter. He was probably the "Peter Wyer" who "died Oct. 12th, 1653," as the entry stands on the Newbury records. He certainly was not the father of the children first given above, as both Coffin, Farmer and Thornton (Gen. Reg. Vol. 6, p. 49, and Vol. 13, p. 272) have stated, as has been abundantly and satisfactorily shown by the more careful investigations of the Hons. S. D. Bell and Joseph Dow. Indeed the proof that the Massachusetts genealogists were wrong, exists upon the records themselves, for the last named Nathaniel Weare, being then of Hampton, N. H., in his deposition (Gen. Reg. Vol. 6, p. 50) calls the Benjamin Sweet, above, his brother-in-law; so that either their wives were sisters, or, one of these men must have married a sister of the other: but the records show that "Nathaniel Weare and Elizabeth Swayne was married Dec'r 3, 1656"⁽³⁾. Sweet did marry a Weare, and she must have been a sister of the above Nathaniel, in order to establish the relationship he deposed to as above; and of course her father was his father too. What was this father's name? The record of her marriage gives the solution, viz: "Benjamin Sweet was married to Hester, daughter of Nathaniel Weare, 1 Nov. 1647⁽³⁾).

7 Mary; b. ———; m. John Swayne, and removed to Nantucket⁽²⁾).

8 Mehitable; b. ———; m. Daniel Tilton.

Hon. Nathaniel Weare (3), m., 3 Dec. 1656⁽³⁾, Elizabeth, daughter of Richard and Basselle Swayne, of Hampton. He lived in Newbury a few years after his marriage, and his first two children were born there. In 1662, he removed to Hampton, N. H., having had a conveyance of land there, 31 Oct. 1661⁽⁴⁾, from his father-in-law, Richard Swayne, who describes himself therein as "late of Hampton," (he had removed with his two younger sons to Nantucket). He became one of the most influential men, not only in that town but throughout the Province. He went twice to England, with the remonstrances of his fellow-townsmen and all those in the Province who were opposed to Cranfield and Mason, and who were oppressed by them, and acted as their agent to prosecute the appeals against Mason's judgments, before the King in Council.

Besides minor offices that he held, he was a Councillor of the Government of New Hampshire from 1692 to January, 1698-9, and again from 31 July 1699, to 24 Dec. 1715, when he voluntarily resigned, "in consideration of his age and remote living." He was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1694-5. He was a Justice of the Peace, occasionally, till 1699, and after that, Justice of the Quorum till his retirement in 1715.

His wife, Elizabeth, died 10 Feb'y 1712: he died 13 May 1718, in his 87th year⁽²⁾).

Their children were:

9 Elizabeth; b. 5 Jan'y 1657-8, at Newbury⁽³⁾; m. Thomas Cram, and had 4 children.

10 Peter; b. 15 Nov. 1660, at Newbury⁽³⁾. (See below after No. 15).

11 Mary; b. 23 Sept. 1663, at Hampton⁽⁹⁾; d., unmarried, 6 Sept. 1682, aged 19.

12 Sarah; b. 11 Aug. 1666.

13 Nathaniel; b. 29 Aug. 1669. (See below after No. 19).

14 Hannah; b. 7th 11 mo. 1672 (i.e. 7 Jan'y 1673⁽⁶⁾).

15 Abigail; b. 13 Sept. 1676⁽⁶⁾.

Hon. Peter Weare (10), called also "Colonel" in his latter days, was also an important man in the Province, although apparently not always on the popular side. He was a large dealer in real estate, both here [N. H.] and in Maine. He kept the principal inn outside of Portsmouth. He succeeded his father as a Councilor of the Province. He was also for four years a Justice of the Superior Court.

He married, 1st, 6 Jan'y 1692⁽⁵⁾, Elizabeth Wilson, of Exeter, who died 29 June of the same year⁽⁶⁾. He married, 2d, before 1698, Widow Elizabeth West, (daughter of Gabriel Tetherly, and widow of John West⁽⁸⁾). He died subsequent to Sept. 1744.

His children were :

16 Peter ; b. 22 Dec. 1698.

17 Nathaniel ; b. — — — 1700.

18 Susannah ; b. 1 May 1702 ; m., 4 March 1722, Captain Nathaniel Healey.

19 Ebenezer ; b. 4 March 1708.

There are now no descendants of Colonel Peter Weare who bear his name.

Hon. Nathaniel Weare (13), called also "Deacon" and "Judge," was also a man of mark, and his retirement from the bench was, no doubt, connected with the revival of Mason's proprietary claim, which his father had so long and actively opposed. He was for eight years a Justice of the Peace, and for four years a Justice of the Superior Court. He was largely interested in purchases of land at the Eastward, buying of Sir William Pepperell, at Biddeford^(9 10), and at North Yarmouth, of Gedney^(11 12). He is termed "millwright," in the Pepperell deed, and he built a mill at North Yarmouth as early as 1719, by one account⁽¹¹⁾, or 1715, by another⁽¹²⁾.

He married, 1st, 17 Nov. 1692⁽⁶⁾, Huldah Hussey who died 2 May 1701⁽⁶⁾. He married, 2d, 24 Aug. 1703⁽⁵⁾, Mary Wait. He died 26 March 1755, probably in that part of Hampton now called Hampton Falls, and his will was proved 24 April following.

By his first wife he had :

20 Daniel ; b. 12 Sept. 1693⁽⁶⁾.

21 Peter ; b. 16 Jan'y 1695⁽⁶⁾. (See below after No. 32).

22 John ; b. 12 Nov. 1696⁽⁶⁾.

23 Hannah ; b. 12 Jan'y 1699⁽⁶⁾.

24 Huldah ; b. 16 Jan'y 1701⁽⁶⁾.

By his second wife he had :

25 Nathan ; b. 22 Sept. 1705⁽⁶⁾ ; d. unm., 17 June 1725.

26 Mary ; b. 19 Dec. 1706 ; m. Jeremiah Brown, 7 Dec. 1728.

27 Mercy ; b. 22 March 1708⁽⁶⁾ ; d. 18 March 1722-3.

28 Sarah ; b. 5 July 1709-10⁽⁶⁾.

29 Elizabeth ; b. 11 Oct. 1711⁽⁶⁾ ; mar., 13 Dec. 1733⁽⁶⁾, Joseph Tilton.

30 Meshech; b. 16 Jan'y 1713⁽⁶⁾. (See below after No. 42).

31 Abigail; b. 17 May 1716⁽⁶⁾.

32 Mehitabel; b. 18 Dec. 1720⁽⁶⁾.

Capt. Peter Weare (21), (No. 88, 1st Ch. Cat.), removed to North Yarmouth, Maine, and, as he himself deposed, married there, 30 May 1720, Sarah Felt. (No. 48, 1st Ch. Cat.), and was at that time Town Clerk⁽¹⁴⁾. He rebuilt, for the third time, the saw-mill, about this date⁽¹²⁾, which he received from his father, Nathaniel, above. He was drowned while crossing the river, near his house, 13 April 1743, and his body was found and interred 5 May following⁽¹⁴⁾, although the inscription from his gravestone, as printed on p. 5, "OLD TIMES," makes his death occur just one month earlier. His widow died 3 Jan'y 1768⁽¹⁴⁾.

Their children were:

33 Huldah; b. 14 Nov. 1721; m., 19 Apr. 1737, Richard Mitchell, of Kittery⁽¹⁴⁾.

34 Sarah; b. 27 Feb'y 1723, at Hampton⁽¹⁴⁾.

35 Lydia; (No. 124, 1st Ch. Cat.); b. 21 Aug. 1726, at Hampton; m., 13 July 1743, Jacob Brown⁽¹⁴⁾.

36 Content; b. 7 Jan'y 1728, at North Yarmouth; d. 8 Oct. 1737⁽¹⁴⁾.

37 ———; b. and d. in March, 1731⁽¹⁴⁾.

38 Peter; b. 29 May 1732⁽¹⁴⁾; d. 24 Sept. 1737⁽¹⁴⁾; (See p. 5, "OLD TIMES").

39 Daniel; b. 14 Nov. 1734⁽¹⁴⁾; d. 24 Sept. 1737⁽¹⁴⁾; (See p. 5, "OLD TIMES").

40 Joseph; b. 9 March 1737⁽¹⁴⁾. (See below after No. 30).

41 Elijah; b. 29 Oct. 1739⁽¹⁴⁾. (See below after No. 51).

42 Hannah; b. 22 Aug. 1742⁽¹⁴⁾. Intention of marriage with Winthrop Baston, of Wells⁽¹⁴⁾.

Hon. Meshech Weare, (30), was graduated from Harvard College in 1735: was Colonel of a militia regiment: Speaker of the House of New Hampshire, in 1752: Commissioner to the Congress at Albany, in 1754: a Justice of the Superior Court, and, in 1777, Chief Justice, and President of the Council. During the Revolutionary period, he held the highest offices, legislative, judicial, and executive: and under the new Constitution was elected the first President, which office he resigned before the close of the year 1784⁽¹³⁾.

He was twice married; 1st, to Elizabeth Shaw, 20 July 1738, by whom he had two children⁽⁷⁾; and, 2d, to Mehitabel Wainwright, 11 Dec. 1746, by whom he had eight children⁽⁷⁾. He died 15 Jan'y 1786, in his 73rd year. He was a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. A monument, said to be the largest in the State, has been erected at Hampton Falls, by order of the Legislature, to the memory of this distinguished man. The town of Weare, N. H., was named for him.

Joseph Weare, (40), will probably forever be known by the sobriquet of "the Indian-Killer." Just what part of the traditions of his righteous vengeance and prowess as exemplified upon the savage destroyers of his relatives is true, and what is fictitious, will probably never be accurately ascertained; but one has only to read some of these stories as printed on pp. 15 and 16, of "OLD TIMES," and in that early collection of Indian tales and adventures called "Forest and Shore," purposely made to be thrilling at whatever disregard of historical facts, and then to compare them with such facts as the records show, as printed on pp. 152 and 153, "OLD TIMES," to see how succeeding generations amplify and exaggerate whatever comes to them in traditional form.

A reference to the extracts from his private journal, as given in the first mentioned article, enables one to evolve from the mists of unwritten history the conclusion that he was a God-fearing man, who by making these enemies of civilization the objects of his personal attention whenever they crossed his path, aided in securing to his community freedom from such savage inroads.

He married, 20 March 1760⁽¹⁵⁾, Mary Noyes, (No. 229, 1st Ch. Cat.), of Falmouth.

Their children were:

43 Nathaniel; b. 11 Dec. 1760; d. 19 Dec. 1760⁽¹⁷⁾.

44 Sarah; b. 14 Nov. 1761^(14 17).

45 John; b. 27 June 1764; d. 18 June 1767^(14 17).

46 Andrew; b. 21 Sept. 1765^(14 17).

47 Mary; b. 12 Jan'y 1768; d. young⁽¹⁷⁾.

48 Nathaniel; b. 12 May 1769^(14 17).

49 Mary; b. 12 May 1769; m. Capt. John March, of Falmouth; d. — Aug. 1847^(14 17). From this union the compiler is descended in the third generation.

50 Joseph; b. 12 May 1772⁽¹⁷⁾.

51 Huldah; b. 29 Aug. 1774⁽¹⁷⁾.

He died shortly after this last date, while absent on a trip to Boston. His widow m., 2d, Deacon Humphrey Merrill, of Falmouth, and died there.

PROPRIETORS' PLAN
NORTH YARMOUTH, MAINE.

On the opposite page is a plan of the ancient town of North Yarmouth, Maine, copied from the Town Records. For this very valuable contribution to the history of our town the readers of "OLD TIMES" are indebted to Mr. WILLIAM M. SARGENT.

Below will be found extracts from Mr. Sargent's letter enclosing the tracing of the map, and transcripts from the records which are necessary for a correct understanding of the plan.

Mr. Sargent writes, "The tracing I have very carefully made from the Proprietors' Plan of the sectional part thereof showing the 106 "Home Lots." Although the writing on the Plan has been so defaced and torn off that the Surveyor's name does not appear, I am convinced from evidence inherent therein, that it is the original "Resurvey" made by Samuel Jones, in 1741, and I point out the error still existing in the original numbering of Nos. 52 and 70, and the correction thereof in these minutes from the Records, as one ground for my conviction. The three numbers (52), (70), (103), in black circles, I have myself added."

Memoranda from the Proprietors' Records, accounting for the changes in location and numbering of various Lots on their Plan, as made by Samuel Jones, Surveyor, in 1741.

Wherefore It is agreed & Voted That the said Lot be anew laid out in some other Place where the said Baker shall make Choice of, on y^c Land not already taken up. on Yarmouth Neck, lying between Felt's Falls & and the West side of Royal's River, & be numbered 52, and that upon Return of y^c said Lots being new laid out. the said Baker's Right & Title to the Lot laid by s^c Stream shall be disallowed of, made null, void & of none Effect, and the new Lot shall be confirmed to him, the said Samuel Baker."

PROPRIETORS' RECORDS, NORTH YARMOUTH, MAINE.

This article is copied from the original Record Book of the first Proprietors of the Plantation afterwards called North Yarmouth. The period of time covered by this record is from 1681-6, and from 1722 to 1779. This article will be, as far as possible, an exact copy of the text of the original book, with which it has been carefully compared by Dr. CHARLES E. BANKS.

RECORD OF BAPTISMS

AT THE

FIRST CHURCH, N. YARMOUTH.

The records of the Church of Christ in North Yarmouth, as it was early designated, were originally kept in an account-book with parchment binding, entered in the hand-writing of Rev. Ammi R. Cutter. Probably in the pastorate of Rev. Nicholas Loring a new book, like the other in size and shape, excepting the lack of commercial air about it, was procured and a literal transcript made by the second pastor; the first book being employed by William Cutter as an omnium gatherum of charges, weather notes, general memoranda, etc., etc. However, the Church finally came into possession of the original, as both books, duplicates of each other for a number of years, are among the archives of the First Church in Yarmouth at the present time.

SAYWARD—Mass. archives contain bill of sale of land to Henry Sayward, of Hampton, [N. H.] 92 mo. 1647. Exeter, N. H. Registry of Deeds contain a deposition of his, 6 Feb. 1670, wherein he speaks of himself as "aged about 44 years."

JOHN ANGIER HYDE, M. D.

[By N. T. TRUE, M. D.]

Among the most prominent physicians who have ever lived within the limits of Old North Yarmouth, was JOHN ANGIER HYDE, of Freeport, Maine.

He was born in Rehoboth, Mass., July 10, 1771. He was the son of Rev. Ephraim and Mary (Angier) Hyde. He lived with his uncle, Rev. Samuel Angier, of East Bridgewater, Mass., from whom he received his earlier education. It is not known with whom he studied medicine, but it was after the usual manner of his day to study a certain number of years with a private physician and then enter upon the duties of his profession, without the advantages of a medical school.

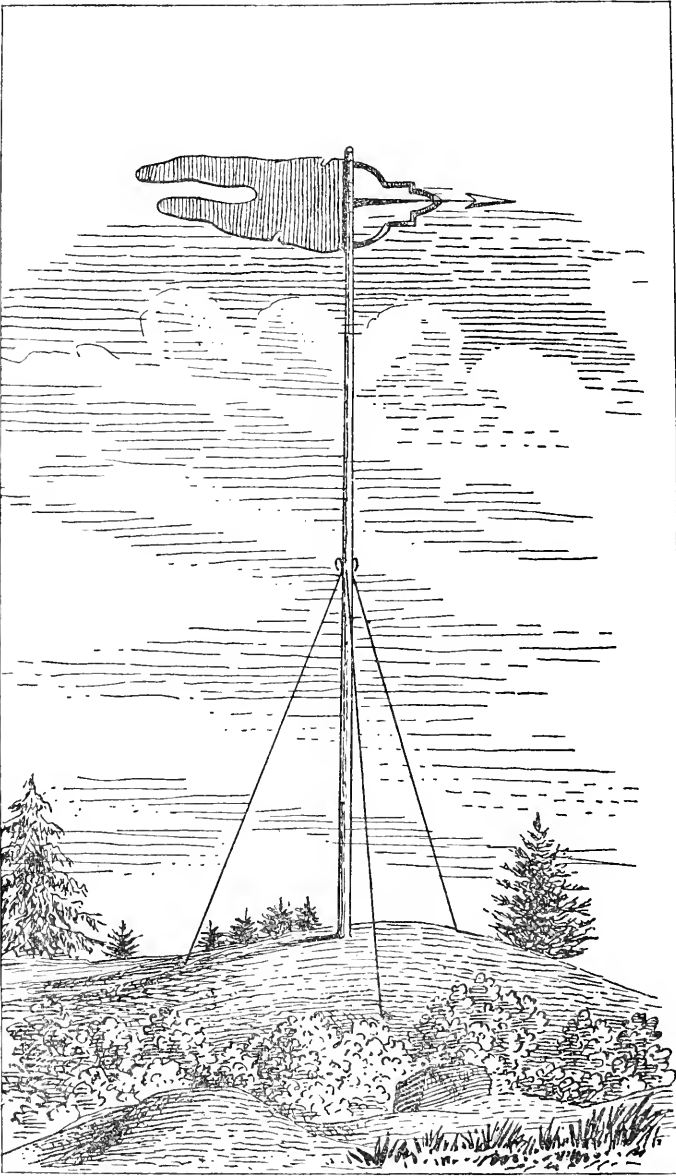

He commenced the practice of medicine in 1792. In 1796 he was married to Miss Priscilla Wharff, of Freeport, but formerly of Cape Cod.

Dr. Hyde died in Freeport, Feb. 19, 1857, after a most laborious practice of nearly sixty-five years. He commenced his practice when a large majority of the farms in his circuit were settled by young men, who had reared large families within a few years. Whole neighborhoods never thought of employing another physician, even for consultation.

He was a perfect gentleman in all his intercourse with his fellow-citizens, and in a remarkable manner secured their respect. He was strictly temperate at time when so many of his own and other professions fell under the ruinous influences that surrounded him. In fact, his moral character was always above reproach.

Genial and cheerful, he was always welcomed in the sick-room. In those days, it was no uncommon thing for the older children of the family to wake in the morning and hear the doctor in earnest conversation with the mother of a neighboring family, and on rising, to learn from her that he had brought in his capacious saddle-bags a little brother or sister to live with them. The size of the doctor's saddle-bags left no doubt in the matter to the younger members of that family. In fact, so important was the doctor's presence on such occasions, that legitimacy was almost out of the question should he happen to be absent.

He was a man of fine personal appearance. He wore a white fur hat, a white necker-chief and gloves, and rode in a gig after a powerful horse.

He was wholly devoted to his profession, though he took great interest in the education of his children. His daughters constituted a prominent element in the society of the town for many years, while there was a peculiar geniality prevailing in his household by their presence aided by that of the doctor himself.

It need only be added that Dr. Hyde will long be remembered as the beloved physician, the good citizen, and for his noble manhood. His peculiar courteous manners, united with a sound judgment, seem to have left on the public mind a professional reputation untarnished, and a character foremost in the annals of the town. Of so high esteem was he regarded by the public as a physician and as a man, that Bowdoin College bestowed on him in 1831 the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine,—a compliment rarely given in those days.

Doctor Hyde's children were:—

- 1 Mary Angier; born July 27, 1797; married Dr. Ebenezer Wells, and settled in Freeport.
- 2 John Angier; born May 10, 1799; lived but short time.
- 3 John Angier; born June 13, 1801; lived but short time.
- 4 Sarah Ann; Apr. 4, 1803; married Rev. Caleb Hobart, and settled in North Yarmouth.
- 5 Priscilla; Jan. 3, 1806; married Richard Belcher, a lawyer, and settled in Freeport.
- 6 John Angier; Feb. 27, 1809; entered Bowdoin College, but when nearly ready to graduate he was compelled to give up his studies and go home, where he died in 1829, unmarried.
- 7 Eliza Louis; Sept. 26, 1811; married John Davis, a mechanic, and settled in Freeport.
- 8 Ephraim Augustus; Aug. 10, 1814; married Susan Hale Coffin, of Newburyport, Mass.; studied medicine with Dr. Henry Childs, of Pittsfield, Mass., and graduated from Berkshire Medical School; settled in Freeport, where he died, Apr. 15, 1871.
- 9 Susan Nye; July 2, 1818; died when few years old.

THE OLD VANE.

On the opposite page we present an accurate engraving of the Vane on the Ledge, once a part of the old church at North Yarmouth, but which has for many years been a prominent object on the bluff in the rear of the site of the old meeting-house. This is from a sketch made by Mr. SAMUEL DORRANCE SEABURY, of Yarmouth, Maine.

About all the information attainable of this old relic, is given on pages 6, 98, 118, 183, 191 and 208, OLD TIMES.

THE OLD BURIAL-GROUND, NORTH YARMOUTH, MAINE.

[SAMUEL DORRANCE SEABURY.]

THE PIONEERS.

Time, in its ceaseless, onward flow,
Marks each one in his turn,
And bids him down that dark sea go,
To which there is no bourn.

The Pioneers, who marched before,
And won their cherished dream,
May only watch us from the shore,—
Alone we cross Death's stream!

But we, for whom they smoothed the way,
(That way lies open yet—)
Can grandest tribute to them pay—
Their precepts ne'er forget.

We in their places stand awhile—
 Shall we not nobly strive
 To win, as they, high Heaven's smile?
 And so as surely thrive.

Thus may we keep our fathers' fame,
 Untarnished as of yore,
 Nor cause to rise the blush of shame
 Our children's faces o'er.

When we gaze upon this last resting-place of that early band of Pioneers who so gallantly and patiently led the van in the march of civilization on these then wild and inhospitable shores, and note the quaint inscriptions on their crumbling tombstones, the mind instinctively goes back over the long vistas of years, and we feel, as in a dream, dim memories and weird visions of the olden time come over us like a spell.

Backward, through the mirror of tradition and history, we see the unbroken forest shrouding island and main in robes of emerald beauty, and hanging arches of fantastic shapes and colors over the mossy banks of the darkly gliding streams; with the silence of solitude over all, save where the simple redman wakes the echoes of the grand old woods with twang of bow-string and dip of paddle; or the prowling wolf, with long-drawn note, disturbs the peaceful night.

Then we picture to ourselves the slow and watchful advances of those daring and hardy Pioneers of the Wilderness, Phillips, Felt, Royall, Consins, Lane, Maine, Holman, Blashfield, Gendall, and others, who were the first to pitch their cabins on these rugged shores and strike the signal-blow of Improvement, which, through the untiring efforts of their descendants, has brought this place to the front rank of civilization.

All honor to those noble men who, surrounded by dark and almost impenetrable forests, from whence they were often beset by wild and savage beasts and still wilder and more savage redmen, amid dangers and difficulties of which we, in this happier time, can have very little conception, persevered, and hewed from giant wood and sterile soil the foundations for the thousands of happy and enlightened homes that now sit upon the well-cultivated fields of this favored land.

How different this place two hundred years ago, at the close of King Philip's War, when terms of peace were concluded at Falmouth, in April, 1678, and the survivors began to return to their desolated homes!

Worn and weary from the long war and the close confinement in garrisons, the harrassed settlers returned and again took up the struggle for existence, amid the inclemency of a late Spring, only, after a few years, to be again driven away, and have their fire-sides and all their hard-earned improvements once more destroyed and laid waste.

Another, and then another long and bloody war succeeded, and a quarter of a century elapses ere we behold the sturdy and invincible Pioneer once more re-kindling his long-extinguished fire under the shelter of the Old Ledge, and hear again the echo of his axe on the banks of the Westcustogo.

But the dangers and trials of these brave men were not yet at an end. The shadows of the dark forest still lowered upon them, and from its depths came up the howl of the wild beast and the war-whoop of the savage, and the long-contested soil drank tears and blood before the indomitable energy and perseverance of those early settlers triumphed over all difficulties and enabled them to transmit to their posterity the comparative comforts of a peaceful, though still rude, home. Biography is the key-stone of history ; or to state the proposition in another form, histories are collective biographies. The combined story of individual action makes up the complete measure of a national chronicle. Without the personal element history would become miserably dry and sink into justified oblivion ; for motives that only arise in the individual constitute the charming seductiveness of philosophic historical study. In direct ratio to the fulness of biographical knowledge proceeds the complete picture of historical effects. The motives of love, jealousy, avarice and pique play more important parts in the tragedies of historical climaxes than the higher factors of state-craft. He is the keener student of history who masters contemporary biography.

Upon this basis the life of one of the most prominent men in the annals of North Yarmouth seems to suggest minute inspection so that the chronicle of the old town may approach the perfection which we desire. The romantic story of his career, his banishment and tragic death offers enough stimulus to learn more of him, were these alone the cause of his prominence. But as the first representative of the town in the provincial legislature, as one of her earliest selectmen, as an enterprising business man, as an honored citizen of the commonwealth holding important official trusts he naturally invites our attention. The short sketch of Captain Gendall which appeared in one of the earlier issues of this magazine, (pp. 76-78) though substantially correct, is deficient in many essential particulars and erroneous in other of its statements and inferences. It is the purpose of this paper to deal wholly with facts which will be reinforced by verbatim extracts from ancient records never before printed, and to offer such comments and conjectures on doubtful points as seem to be warranted by circumstances. I present it to the readers of OLD TIMES with the words of Montaigne :—

—"Here is a nosegay of culled flowers to which I have brought nothing save the string that binds them."—

Walter Gendall came to this country about 1640, the records of the Trelawney Plantation at Richmond's Island containing evidence of his residence in this region at that early period. It is concluded, with reasonable hope of proof, that he was a native of England and possibly a Cornishman, as persons of that name have resided in the parishes of Penzance and Madron (County Cornwall) for several hundred years. These two towns are about fifteen or twenty miles from Falmouth, England, a fact that may be of some importance when it is remembered that he was a leading planter in Falmouth, Maine, for many years. The possibility of his influence in naming the new settlement in this country suggests itself readily. After the collapse of the Trelawney Plantation, which shortly followed the death of John Winter, its prime-mover, we hear no more of Gendall for twenty years. He was undoubtedly a minor when he emigrated, and from that time to his first re-appearance on the province records he was quietly attending to his own affairs. What that business was we may conjecture from the following deposition :—

"Walter Gendle sweareth y^t about 3 years since he did make up a fence for John Tinney ; and Michael Maddiver and his wife came and looked upon it and said that it was sett as straight if it had been sett by a line, and that no man in the countrey e^d have done it better : but about two months since I did see Michael Maddiver pluck down some of y^e same fence.

June 11th '64

Coram Rd Foxwell."

This would seem to indicate that he was familiar with the use of carpenters' tools, and, according to the testimony of the belligerent Maddiver, could handle them quite skilfully. The probability is that he was a bright, smart, young colonist, who was ready to earn an honest shilling, be it at the joiners' bench or behind the plough, or bartering for skins with the dusky denizen of the forest. The court records of the province for the year 1666, at the session holden at Falmouth July 26th, report him as a grand juror for that town, and bondsman for James Robinson, of Scarborough, who was charged with murder.

The next scene in the story of his life is that incident which determines the future happiness of the man, and we are enabled to give in frigid forms that act which gave him so much joy. From the subjoined extract we shall learn the maiden name of his wife, and to obviate unnecessary repetition we must look ahead many years, when, after the death of her first husband, she became the wife of Theodosius Moore, of Bridgewater, Mass. In one of her transfers of property she discloses her christian name, Joan, and thus we learn that the wife of Walter Gendall's heart was Mistress Joan Guy.

"one hundred acres of land * * * in Falmouth * * * next adjoining to the lot of Thomas Standford, and on the south side thereof, commonly known by the name of Papooding point," which he bought of Rev. Robert Jordan, 10 May 1662. "The above written was with the consent of Nicholas Guy."

This property was situated at what is now Ferry Village, in Cape Elizabeth, directly across the harbor from the noisy wharves of the city of Portland. It was not reckoned among the real estate which he possessed at the time of his death, and it is probable that he sold it, though no transfer is recorded. Walter Gendall was an Episcopalian, and as such did not sanction or acknowledge the usurpation of the rights of Sir Ferdinando Gorges by the Massachusetts Bay authorities. The Puritans who came to this country for religious freedom and toleration of conscience, sadly forgot these purposes before long. Scarce ten years had passed over their heads ere they were banishing Quakers, bullying Episcopalians and branding Baptists in the name of religious liberty. Gendall knew the unrelenting persecution with which they pursued all who refused to subscribe to their tenets of belief. And when they came to push their claim of territorial possession into Maine, about 1652, he bitterly opposed the scheme. But the majority of the inhabitants thought it best to submit, and the whole province came under Puritan control in 1658, but not without many protests and murmurings of discontent. Some of the prominent opponents of the trick were arrested for treasonable utterances, among them Rev. Robert Jordan, of Spurwink, the pastor of Gendall. This discontent lasted for years, for although the province had a good civil government, yet the planters were slow to forgive the means of gaining authority over their possessions. So late as 1670 we find Gendall insubordinate, and at the session of the court held at York April 25th, the following charges were brought against him:

"We p^rsent Walter Gyndall for villifying & abusing y^e Commission^r of Falmouth & Scarborough Commissioⁿ Court by saying they had no power to try above forty shillings: with other abusive words, which was sometime in Aprill last. Sentenced to bee admonish^d and pay five shillings."

"Walter Gyndall was secured under an officers' hand for refusing to take the oath of fidelity, w^{ch} oath afterwards hee tooke In Court."

But these summary proceedings did not check his contempt for the Puritan officials, for at the session of the court held 4 April 1671, we find him forcibly resisting the constituted authorities:—

“Walter Gyndall & Nathan Bedford being Complayned of by Anthony Roe, Constable of Scarboro, for obstructing him in his office & y^e execution of it, & for sleighting of Authority, proveing the same by his & other evidences w^{ch} were in Court, for whose offences this Court concludes that y^e s^d Wal: Gyndall and Nath: Bedford for y^r offences are fined Three pounds each p^{son} and to pay 24 s. costs, & they are hereby Injoynd either to make a publique acknowledgem^t of their offences in open Court, with p^{miss} of amendment, or to give in 20 £ bond, with good security, for good behavior unto y^e next Court houlden for this County.” They preferred to give bonds.

Finding that discretion was the better part of valor, Gendall forthwith paid an enforced respect to the civil authorities. At least we have no further record of his treasonable carriage.

Another incident gleaned from the court records, viewed in connection with his fence-building for John Tinney, under date of 19 Sept. 1671, confirms in a measure the supposition offered above as to the occupation of Gendall:—

“A complaynt of Walter Gyndall against Ambrose Boaden for illegal taking away of a p^rcell of posts w^h 3 mortised Holles in them, without his consent, about 60 odd posts.

The court finds for y^e Complaynant 60 odd posts & costs 40s 6d of Court or pay a equivalent, and for his trespass against the county we find him Twenty shillings and Fees 5s.”

Like the large majority of the colonists who went through the same experience at some time in their lives, Gendall was brought before the august tribunal of justice and indicted for absenting himself from church. The records of our early courts are so full of these entries that it would seem as if the whole population had relapsed into heathenism. Undoubtedly it was the popular method of “getting even” with some hostile neighbor after all other means of irritation had been employed. The offense was punishable by a small fine, and the informant, after receiving a fee as a witness, had the satisfaction of seeing his enemy mulcted in the sum of five shillings. The saints elect suffered frequently in this respect, and so we shall not be surprised to read this indictment against him, found by the grand jury at the court holden 2 July 1672, although at the same session he was a trial-juryman:—

“We p^{sent} Walter Gyndall for not attending the publike place of meetcing to worship god on the Lord’s days.

Jury: non-appearance.”

Again he went through the same farce, 10 July 1674, but this time we have a little insight into the circumstances. His answer must have been exasperating to the rigidly religious Puritans who had but lately arrested and fined the Rev. Robert Jordan for baptizing children according to the rites of the Church of England!

“We p^resent Walter Gyndall for not frequenting the place of gods’ publike worship on the Lord’s day.

Being questioned upon y^e p^resentm^t he answered that he did Attend M^r Jordan’s Meeteing frequently upon y^e Lord’s days.”

During these years, as evidence subsequently testifies, he was gradually accumulating a goodly share of this world’s goods. The first record of any purchase of property occurs under date of June 3, 1673, when he bought fifty acres of land of his pastor and friend:—

York Registry)	Robert Jordan, of Spurwinke, clerk,— of Deeds,)	to
II-275)	Walter Gyndall, of Spurwinke, yeoman,—

Consideration: “three pounds tenn shillings in worke payed, as also for 2 days worke or foure shillings to be payed annually.”

“A parcel of land contayneing fivety acres, in a square lying & bounded on y^e Eastward side of Spurwinke River from the uttermost poynt of a certain brooke commonly known by the name of Jonas his brooke on the one side and on the sayd river on the other side, proceeding upon a square to the completing of the same.” This property was sold by the administrator of his estate for £30. The character of the original transfer smacks considerably of a tenantry system, but the rental must have been subsequently adjusted by full payment of the value of the land. This year (1673) at the July term of the court, beginning on the 1st of the month, he made his appearance as a grand-juryman, and at the October term, which began on the 3d, he was appointed administrator of the estate of John Mills, deceased. The character of the man may be judged from the number of times he was selected to execute trusts of this nature.

Here we are called upon to record a curious incident, and the only one of the kind that occurs in his life. The extract from the proceedings of the court fully sets forth the enormity of the presumption entertained by Gendall, and the penitent man acknowledged his action as reprehensible, but craved their indulgence, probably, “being y^e first tyme.”

“We p^resent Walter Gyndall for presumeing the office of Commissi^r to carry vots for Magistrats from y^e Town of Falmouth to y^e Shyre Town, then Declaring himselfe a Commissioner for y^e Town of Falmouth, hee being not Chosen by the say^d Town.

The p^resentment owned by Walter Gyndall, being y^e first tyme, to be admonished & pay costs 5s.”

We offer no explanation or extenuation, for he was evidently detected in the crime of counting himself into office, and acknowledged it too. The bald fact is quite patent, and we unhesitatingly scratch a big black mark against his name. This was an unfortunate year for him, as it will recalled that at this same term of the court he was indicted for not attending public worship. At the next session, beginning October 6th of this same year, he appears as the attorney for one of his neighbors who still retained confidence in his integrity:—

“Walter Gyndall, Attirney for M^r Walls, craves his Charges Contra Rec: Foxwell for not prosecuting his action w^unto he attached him. Costs for y^e Defend^t.”

Even the courts recognized the culprit of July 10 1674, and he was appointed the legal guardian of a minor, April 9, 1675, as appears by the following document. Evidently they had no regard for the moral aspects of the appointment or respect for their own opinions:—

“In order to the disposing of the child of Caleb Beale, a fatherless Child, this Court thinks meete to Committ her into the hands & care of Walter Gyndall for her Education & maintenance as a servant out, to bee kept untill the full tearme of thirteen yeares be expired from y^e date hereof, the child being now about 5 yeares of age, & in Case y^e s^d child have any Estate, It is hereby ordered to bee delivered unto the possession of Walter Gyndall who is to Improve it for the best advantage of the Child, who is required to render an Accop^t of his doings y^lin w^h Authority of this County or Province shall see meete to require it.”

About this time the Indians throughout New-England were becoming dissatisfied with the English management. Ever since the landing at Plymouth, the white settlers had been gradually encroaching upon their territory, and many injustices were heaped upon the patient redmen. Advantage was taken of their weakness, which resulted from tribal divisions, and the traditional inch was usually stretched to the customary ell in every instance by the greedy settlers. This state of affairs was the occasion of angry protestations from the Indians, and culminated in the sanguinary strife between the two races in 1675-6, known in history as “King Philip’s War.” Here the Indians of all tribes made common cause in their desperate attempt to exterminate their avaricious enemies. The frontier settlements were the first to be alarmed, and in the fall of 1675 the inhabitants of Spurwink came under military supervision. The following letter indicates the position held by Gendall, and may be the occasion of the title of “Captain,” which he bore throughout his subsequent career:—

“To Walter Gendall, Com^r of y^e Gard at Spurwink:

These are in His Ma^ties name to require you to send four able men, compleat in armes and amunicion, unto y^e maine gard this day before sunset to attend such orders as they shall receive in order to the destroying of y^e barbarous enemy: and hereof not to fail as you will answer it at your peril.

from y^e main gard: 4 9ber 1675.

Josh: Scottow, Captⁿ.”

The inhabitants at the eastward however suffered but little during the fall of that year, and after an attack on the garrison at Black Point the Indians drew off, contented with occasional predatory excursions. He attended the session of the court, held at York, 4 July 1676, and was appointed appraiser of the estate of Ambrose Boaden, deceased, who died 8 Feb. 1675. It will be remembered that this Boaden was the person who stole "a p^rcell of posts" from Gendall five years before. He also presented himself as security for Thomas Cummings and John Harmon, administrators of the estate of Richard Cummings, at the same court, and received the appointment of administrator of the estate of John Richardson, deceased.

This would seem honor and onerous enough for one man at a single session, but he did extra duty, serving as a trial-juryman. When he returned to his home the news of fresh massacres to the westward told the settlers to be wary, and he was soon at his post in the garrison at Black Point. The following extract from a letter complaining of the difficulty of governing the militia, indicates his position in the summer of 1676, two days before the horrible butchery at Falmouth:—

"Cap^t. Joshua Scottow,—Wee, underwritten, being of y^e Committee of y^e Mellicia wth Sergiant Tippet * * * * Aug. 9, 1676 Henry Jocelyn. Walter Gendall."

The Indians fell suddenly upon Fort Loyall, Falmouth, August 11th, and in a short time that prosperous settlement merited the name given to it by one of the survivors, "deserted Casco." The savages ventured no further this time, but took their captives towards the Kennebec. Finding that the furious natives were bent upon the gradual extermination of the feeble eastern garrisons, Captain Gendall sent word to the authorities at Boston for reinforcements and they granted a detachment of 130 soldiers. They came to Falmouth and remained about three weeks; but the wily redskins knew better than to invite attack while they staid in this vicinity. The troops then returned to the region of Piscataqua, and Gendall sent word to his friend Nathan Fryer, of Portsmouth, for the use of one of his vessels to assist in the removal of goods. Captain Gendall saw that it was of no use to wage warfare against the treacherous enemy, and he thought best to embark for Portsmouth or Boston with the women and children. The warning was not early enough, for while a part of the Black Point garrison with Gendall were at Richmond's Island loading the ketch generously loaned by Mr. Fryer, the Indian warriors attacked the remaining soldiers in the garrison. This assault was led by one of their most renowned chieftains, Mugg, an able leader, who had been intimate with the whites in peace. He called upon the commander, old Henry Jocelyn, to surrender, promising them certain conditions of immunity. Captain Jocelyn left the fort to hold a conference with him, and when he returned he found the garrison deserted,—the inmates, except members of his own household, having fled to the shore and pushed out in their boats. Jocelyn was then taken prisoner, and the unsated savages proceeded to Richmond's Island where the detachment of fifteen men were loading Fryer's ketch with the household effects of the settlers. The men immediately boarded the vessel and attempted to run her out of the harbor, but unfavorable wind put a stop to this plan, and the deadly fire of the Indians made it unsafe to come on deck.

In this predicament they let go of the anchor to prevent being blown ashore by the strong south-east wind. But the Indians, not to be out-witted, put out in their canoes and cut the cable, and the ketch was soon stranded on the beach. James Fryer, a son of the owner, was lying upon the cabin floor, mortally wounded. The savages shouted out to them that, if they did not surrender, they would set the vessel on fire and burn them to death. After some parley, they agreed to surrender upon condition they should be allowed to ransom themselves by the payment of a stipulated amount of goods within a given time. Then Captain Gendall found himself a prisoner in the hands of a people with whom he had enjoyed peaceable relations for years. He had visited them in their settlements and traded with their chiefs for skins, and was much esteemed by all the tribes. But under the goading of revenge, these natives had become madmen, and they brought down their frenzied hands upon the heads of the innocent and guilty.

Two men were released to fetch the ransom, and Mugg with his tribe, retaining Gendall and eight others, proceeded westward. On the 18th of October they appeared before Wells and demanded the surrender of the garrison. This being refused, they sent Captain Gendall to fully explain to the commander the power of the Indians. Mugg who had now in his charge sixty valuable prisoners, really desired more their ransoms than their scalps. If he could not get the former he secured the latter. With this motive the Captain went as a friend of both parties, knowing well the determination of the Indians, their strength and their valor. He presented the case fairly to the post commander, urging capitulation, with privilege of ransom, rather than needless sacrifice.

Bourne, in his History of Wells, gives a purely imaginary and bombastic account of the above affair, in which he manufactures the indignant refusal of the commander who spurns the proposal, and says something about somebody "passing over his dead body" before he will surrender. For some reason Mugg decided not to force matters, as the town of Wells had two garrison-houses, and he withdrew his warriors. Possibly Captain Gendall may have induced him to refrain from the attack by setting forth the impregnable character of the fortresses. Whatever the circumstances that led him to this conclusion, it placed Captain Gendall in a peculiar predicament. From his positive assertion as to the insatiate determination of the savages, the soldiers at the Wells garrison supposed that they were inviting a bloody battle upon their refusal to surrender themselves. When hours and days passed without an encounter, and scouts reported that the enemy had retreated, the action of Gendall became forthwith a topic of conversation..

Undoubtedly it was hard for them to reconcile his eager explanation of the situation with the subsequent contradictory acts of the savages. Treacherous motives were at once assigned to the Captain who had just been made a prisoner while fighting against his victors. These conclusions of the gossiping garrisons soon found tangible expression, as we shall presently observe. The two prisoners who were released at Richmond's Island, returned with specified ransoms before the appointed time had elapsed, but those Indians who had agreed to the terms of the capitulation had delivered the remaining captives into other hands. These savages took the ransoms, killed one of the bearers and refused to deliver the prisoners. The chieftain Mugg was mortified and indignant that the vagabond Indians should have acted so treacherously, and with Captain Gendall started for Piscataqua. He believed in honest dealing in this matter, and undertook the responsibility of representing his superior sagamore, Madockawando, in a proposition for peace. He took back the young James Fryer who was so seriously wounded at the fight off Richmond's Island.

As to subsequent events, after arrival at Piscataqua, the authorities differ. Drake, in his valuable Book of the Indians, Part III, p. 102, says:—"General Gendall, of Massachusetts, being there, forced Mugg on board his [vessel] and carried him to Boston; for which treacherous act an excuse was pleaded that he was not invested with sufficient authority to treat with him. Madockawando's ambassador, being now in the power of the English, was obliged to agree to such terms as the English dictated."

On the other hand it is argued that Mugg went of his own volition. At any event he went to Boston and made a treaty with the Governor and Council of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in behalf of Madockawando, on the 6th of Nov. 1676. Two vessels were sent to the Penobscot to obtain from the great sagamore his sanction of the articles of agreement, which was obtained. The fifth article of the covenant was as follows:—"That if it doth appear that Walter Gendal and the men sent with him in the vessels from Piscataway with goods from Mr Fryer for the redemption of captives, according to agreement, or any of them are surprized and slain by any of their Indians or any other whom they can bring under their power, that they shall forthwith execute such murderer or murderers or otherwise deliver them up into the hands of the English." From this it appears that Captain Gendall was commissioned to purchase all the captives in the "late unpleasantness," some sixty in number, with ransoms furnished by the government. For the safety of his expedition, as well as for all other articles of the treaty, Mugg offered himself as a hostage. The mission was successful; the captives returned to their desolated homes, and Mugg left for his native wilds to mature plans for another campaign.

The affair at Wells must not be forgotten by the reader, because the soldiers in the garrison there treasured up the recollection of that circumstance with great accuracy. At least some few did. They thought it of sufficient importance to inform the authorities at Boston, who, remembering the hostile attitude which Captain Gendall had always maintained towards their assumption of authority, were glad to press the charges. Accordingly the witnesses were requested to relate their versions of the affair before some competent magistrates. With a sufficient number of such ready tale-bearers who could give a fanciful coloring to the story, the grand jury found an indictment, and he was arrested and carried to Boston and brought before the bar of justice, but his case was deferred till the next term, as appears below:—

	} “Record of the Court of Assistants’ Court holden at Boston 6 Mar. 1676-7 [p. 64.]
Walter Gendall
bound over	} Walter Gendall was called & several evidences Read y ^t were produced ag ^t y ^m , others not being present, he was by mittimus sent to the keeper of the prison in Boston in order to his triall next Court of Assistants.”

The following evidences were offered to the honorable court:—

“The deposition of Peter Bass, aged about 27 years. Being examined maketh oath y^t hee heard the same for substance y^t Phyneas Hull and Benjⁿ Barnard testifyeth two, onley hee remembereth not that Walter Gyndall sayd y^t y^e Indians at Wells were as numerous as trees and stumpes, but Gyndall tould this deponent that y^r were one thousand Indeans double armed about the Town, and five hundred french ready to backe them when they had occasion, and y^rfore would Advise them to surrender there Garrisons, for hee looked at his condition better then ours, for Mogg sayd if they would not resigne y^r Garrisons hee would by here this Moenth but he would have y^e Town, and the sayd Gyndall further sayd that hee and those 11 Indeans, Mogg and y^e rest, lay within shot of Joseph Storer’s garrison that night before they came to demand Fran: Littlefield’s, and y^e say^d Indeans were soe sleepy in the morneing that he had much adoe to wake y^m and was forced to kicke them round before hee could do it, and afterwards wⁿ the sunn was up they came into y^e Town and did mischeefe and demanded our Garrisons, and further sayth not.

Taken upon oath this 3d day of March, 1676-7, before mee, Edw : Rishworth, Asso'te."

It will be noticed that at the preliminary trial Gendall was bound over because the testimony of "others not being present" would be needed. We are able to give the evidence of one other witness, Lieut. Henry Harwood, who was an inhabitant of Boston, and a shoemaker by trade. During the Indian wars he took an active part, being at one time in command of Fort Loyal, Fal-mouth, as will appear by some later papers.

"About the 16th of october Henry Horwood, this Deponant, being att Wells, vnder comand of Lif^t Edward erick, thar cam Indians & fell vpon some, kil'd one Antient man and A youth about 16 yeare old, & wound 3 as they war in y^e * * * *. Of Peter Bass we know but little. He resided in York at one time, and was jail-keeper of the town. He married a daughter of George and Hannah Parker, of that place. He died about 1684, leaving a son Peter. He was convicted of selling beer without a license, in 1682, and that is all the public can ascertain of the character of this ready witness. A Peter Bass was taxed at Pemaquid in 1687.

Captain Gendall was remanded to jail to await the action of the court, which would meet in the following September. At the designated time he was summoned to hear his indictment:—

"Court holden at Boston, 4 September 1677.

Captain Walter Gendall a convicted traitor! Doomed, and upon such evidence! In three days the man who had lost all his property by the fiendish torches of the frenzied redskins,—who had been made a prisoner while fighting them in hand to hand combat,—who had suffered the privations of hunger and cold,—was to run the gauntlet, with a rope around his neck, between hundreds of jeering militiamen! His friends who had watched the progress of the trial, the character of the testimony and the enmity of the Puritan judges, were determined that the sentence should not be executed! And it was not executed, for in one of the three intervening days, probably at midnight, he made his escape from the prison, running the gauntlet of the jailor instead of the soldiery. Of course the particulars of his escape will never be known, nor the direction of his flight. The first intimation the Governor and Council had of his whereabouts came from Nathl. Fryer, of Piscataqua, Gendall's old friend. Probably Gendall went to Scarboro by some roundabout course, and remained se- creted there till the excitement attendant upon his escape had subsided. What part Nathaniel Fryer took in the performance we are unable to say, but he soon addressed this letter to the authorities of the Massachusetts government:—

“To the Hono^{ble} Gov^r & Council sitting } in Boston, Decemb^r 27: 1677. }

Nathaniel Fryer of Piscataqua is humbly bold to informe yo^r Hono^{rs} that hee hath received a Letter from Walter Gendall, late a prisin^r, who doth therein acknowledge his Error and folly in making his escape from the prison before he had satisfied the judgement of this Honord Court of Assistants, whereas yo^r Hono^{rs} had been so favourable to him: his temptation was the poor neesi- tous condition hee was in and utter inability to procure mony for the present Satisfaction thereof: which I am well assured to bee true: knowing the great losses hee sustained by the Enemy and being acquainted with the very necessitous state of his poor wife and family: I am therefore bold (throughout his importunity) to mediate with yo^r Hono^{rs} on his behalfe and to Supplicate yo^r for- giveness of his Escape from prison: and if from the consideration of his poverty you may bee moved to moderate the fine imposed upon him, and allow some time for payment thereof, I shall willing- ly become ingaged to see it satisfied, and shall in behalfe of him and his poor family acknowledge yo^r great favo^r therein.

Yo^r Hono^{rs} humble Servant,
Nath^l ffryer.”

The reader will notice the satire employed by the writer when he says, “whereas yo^r Hono^{rs} had been so favourable to him!

The Council took the horn of the dilemma which Gendall's friend presented to them, and concluded that they were willing to have the money although they could not make him run the gauntlet.

So they passed the following order :—

“Boston, 27 December 1677.

In Ans^r to this petition of Nathaniel Fryer relating to Walter Gendall's escaping out of prison and paying his fine, The Council Judgeth it meete to order y^t in the sayd m^r Nathaniell Fryer Guing in his bond to y^e Secretery for y^e Treasure^r, 80^{.b} for payment of 20^l^b wthin 6 mo & y^e other 20^l^b in 6 months after, w^{ch} when its Donn y^e sayd Gendall is ffreed. By y^e Council, E. R., S^y.”

Accordingly Mr. Fryer immediately drew up the bond as his part of the agreement.

Thus ended the famous farce. It may be supposed that the penalty was remitted in due season, and his friend had the satisfaction of practically assisting him out of his difficulties. All this dramatic scene is in strange contrast to the subsequent action of the Massachusetts people toward Gendall. Scarce five years had passed before they were heaping honors upon him and trusting to him the duties of important executive schemes!

Peace between the Indians and whites was secured by a treaty dated at Falmouth, 12 August 1678. when three English commissioners met Squando and two other sagamores at Fort Loyal. We hear nothing more of Gendall until March 30, 1680, when according to the article in OLD TIMES, before alluded to, he was the Deputy from Falmouth to the General Assembly at York, but was deprived of his seat as he had no certificate of election. We have never seen any confirmation of this statement in the Court Records at York. However, that same year he received another kind of a certificate from Falmouth, as appears by the town records :—

“It is concluded Mr. Gendall shall have a grant of one hundred acres of land to begin at our outmost bounds and so to come this way till 100 acres be ended.” This land was, we think, adjoining to the North Yarmouth boundary line and contiguous to the property which he owned in the new town later. On the 23d of June, 1680, he purchased of old George Felt, whose life had been spent in tilling his great farm in Westustogo, “One hundred acres upland lying & being on the Westward side of George Felt's ould house in Casco Bay, about eighty rodd from s^d house: Beginning at a three forked bla[c]k oake tree near the highway, being marked on both sides, & so down to y^e water side, and then to runne upon a square untill the whole hundred acres be fully compleated & accomplished, with priviledge & full propriety & benefitt of the sea down to lowe water mark: breadth of his s^d tract of land with foure acres of fresh meddows lying about three miles from Felt's ould feild & two acres of sault meddows at the head of the great Cove w^r Walter Gyndall pleaseth to lay it out, with all the meddows belonging to the hundred acres of upland, with all mines, minerals, wood, underwood, profetts, priviledges or lybertys, ease-ments & all other appurtenances to the premises belonging or any way appertaining." About three weeks later he added to his real-estate some valuable property on Chebeague Island, which he purchased of the heirs of his old pastor, Rev. Robert Jordan. The deed reads as follows, and is dated 12 July 1680:—

Dominicus Jordan, Samuel Jordan and Jeremiah Jordan, sons of Rev. Robert Jordan, once of Falmouth, deceased, to Walter Gendall, of Spurwink. "one half part of an island commonly called Jebeague, or Geboag, or the Islands commonly called Cousens' his islands, to the seaward, all in the town of Westcostogoe. These islands being at high water as two islands, yet altho' called Little and Great Gaboag or Jabeague yet is but one island, and the one half thereof is the property of Dominicus, Samuel and Jeremiah Jordan."

These two purchases brought Captain Gendall into the town of North Yarmouth as a tax-payer for the first time, and we may date his citizen-ship in the place from this period.

On the 12th of July, 1681, he purchased of Hon. Bartholomew Gedney the afterwards noted mill-privilege on Royall's River, which was sold to Thomas Stevens by the Indian sagamores, 19 Jan. 1673. Not having the money to pay for this immense tract of land, two miles square, he gave in payment, July 12, 1681, the following agreement of mortgage: Walter Gendall, of Cascoe, and Joane, his wife, and Bartholomew Gedney, of Salem, Mass., "that tract of land lying on Casco Bay, in North Yarmouth, same land granted by several Indian Saggamores to Thomas Stevens, of Kennebec, bearing date 19 Jan. 1673, one moiety of which s^d Stevens conveyed to s^d Gydney Oct. 12, 1674, and another moiety granted by said Stevens to Henerey Sayward and by him mortgaged to said Gydney. Also another parcel on Cascoe Bay, on a certain point called Ryall's Poynt, containing two acres, being the premises conveyed by s^d Gydney to the s^d Gyndall."

On the next day after this transaction the first entries in the North Yarmouth town records were made. Then, in pursuance to the act of incorporation of the town by President Danforth, 22d of Sept. 1680, Messrs. Bartholomew Gedney, Joshua Scottow, Silvanus Davis and Walter Gendall, who were appointed Trustees of the town under this act, proceeded to attend to their duties. Among other provisions for the re-settlement, they made the following:—

"9ly: Mr. Walter Gendell having by allowancy of the Committe built A house and begun A plantation within the Township of North Yarmouth Aforesaid, neere to Falmouth bounds, Mr. Anthony Bracket & Mr. George Pearson are appointed to lay out A farm there for him, not exceding two hundred acres."

*The Bounds of Walter Gendell's Farm

ANTHONY BRACKET } Surveyors."
GEORG PEARSON }

This large farm remained in his possession till his death, when the administrator sold it with the Felt farm for £81, as appears by the accounts hereafter annexed. Gendall was now a large landed proprietor, with estates in Falmouth, Scarboro and North Yarmouth, the care of which must have occupied a large share of his attention. The officials, too, were ever ready to recognize his fine business tact and executive ability, and at the November term of the court held at Wells in 1681, under Major John Davis, Deputy President of the Province of Maine, they entrusted to him the management of the Indian trade for the eastern section, as indicated in the subjoined letter:—

“To Walter Gyndall:—

Mr. Walter Gyndall, Wee having taken the Management of Fort Loyall into o^r own hands who by the order of the Proprietor and President have y^e revenew of the Indean Trade given into o^r disposing for the maintenance y^rof.

These are y^lfore to order you on sight hereof to pay or Cause to bee payd Twenty pounds in silver or what you Can to M^r Fran: Hooke, Treasurer of this Province, whose receipt shall be y^r discharge: & hereof fayle you not. Dated 3^d Noveb^r 1681,

Edw: Rishworth, Secr^{ty}, p^r order of y^e Councill.”

His mills on Royall's River proved remunerative, and, according to Shepley, 100,000 feet of merchantable lumber was produced there yearly. By the tax-warrant of April 10, 1682, his property was rated at £6 for the support of Fort Loyall, and but three other establishments in the Province contributed a like amount. It may be interesting at this juncture to look in upon the Captain and see what kind of a plantation he had at North Yarmouth. For this purpose we will listen to the testimony of one his employees:—

“The Deposition of Oliver Waswall, aged about 69 years, testifyeth & sayeth that about 50 years ago he well remembers that Cap^t Walter Gendall of Casco, in the Province of Main, in New England, had one dwelling house. one grist mill & one saw mill on a certain tract of land and Falls in the ancient town of North Yarmouth, commonly called the first falls in Royall’s River, which s^d lands, house and mills. streams and falls, & all other buildings thereon he possessed, enjoyed and improved as his own right, and that the s^d ancient town of North Yarmouth never disputed s^d Walter Gendall’s claim or title to y^e s^d lands, stream, fall, house, mills, or buildings thereon, but that it was always reputed to be the property of s^d Walter Gendall, and that I, the Deponant, lived and worked with s^d Gendall for some considerable time.
Boston, D^{ecr} 21, 1733. Oliver Wiswall.”

The next eye-witness to the Captain’s plantation is old Tobias Oakman, who frequently appears in North Yarmouth history as the “oldest inhabitant” to testify in relation to boundary lines:—

“The Deposition of Tobias Oakman, aged about seventy one, testifyeth & saith that about fifty years ago he, the Depon^t, lived with Cap^t Walter Gendall, in North Yarm^t, in Casco Bay, & well remembers that Cap^t Walter Gendall cleared, fenced in and improved, above or near the first or lowermost falls, houses & mills of Cap^t Walter Gendall’s buildings on Royall’s River, about eight acres of land, that is to say about four acres of land on the southwest side of said Royall’s River, & about four acres of land on the Northeast side of s^d river where said Gendall kept eight or ten yoa^k of cattle which s^d Gendall improved in logging to said Gendall’s saw mill, and also improved part of said land on both sides of s^d river for other improvements, as turnips & other garden roots for the use of s^d Gendall’s servants & workmen that logged for s^d Gendall, & also s^d Gendall stacked up severall stakes of hay for several years together upon s^d land with which s^d Gendall foddered his cattle, and also improved s^d cattle to draw logs to s^d Gendall’s saw mill, which cattle were afterwards killed by y^e Indians: which lands & improvements said Gendall enjoyed & possessed without any molestation or interruption from the inhabitants of Northyarmouth that he the Depon^t ever heard or knew of.

Boston, March 17, 1735. Tobias Oakman (T his mark.)”

This interesting narrative, with its minute and explicit statements, gives us a pleasing insight into the busy farming and manufacturing operations of Gendall. It also serves to distinguish some of the transient inhabitants of the old town, and to this list we are enabled to add the following:—

“16 June 1739. John Boden, of Marblehead, in y^e County of Essex, shoreman, aged about sixty nine, Deposeth and saith that he was born at Spurwinke River, in y^e County of Yorke, and live there for about twenty seven years: when he was about eighteen years old he went to live with Captain Gendall and was in his service about two years.”

At the June session of the court, 1683, beginning on the 27th, he appears as the first accredited representative from the old town upon the petition of its inhabitants. The court records say:—

“In answe^re to y^e Town of NorthYarmouth who desirs y^r priviledg in sending of a Deputy as well as any [an?] Injunction [Injunction?] to pay y^r rates. Therefore the p^rmisses considered y^e Court ordereth that from hence forward y^e Town of Northyarmouth shall have power to make choyce of a Deputy yearely as other Towns of y^e Province have, w^of the Secre^ty is to give y^m legall notice for y^r choyce by his warrants from tyme to tyme, & M^r Walter Gyndall is now accepted as y^r Deputy for y^e yeare Insewing.”

The honor of acting in this capacity for the first time clearly belongs to him, and it was again his privilege to be chosen by the town for the next year as deputy for the session of June 25th. At the next court he was entrusted with the following duties:—

“It is hereby ordered y^t M^r Walter Gyndall, Major Davess, M^r Wheelwright, Cap^t Jo^s Scottow, Cap^t Ed^w Tyng and M^r Benj^a Blakeman are appoynted a Committee to treat with y^e Indeans at Sacoe & to settle the affayres therein and make return y^of unto the adiournement of the Generall Assembly in Septemb^r next.”

Evidently the Maine people were not afraid that he would betray them into the hands of the Indians. He was also at the same session appointed administrator of the estate of Thomas Brackett, deceased.

It will be noted in the next paper that Henry Harwood, who told such an elaborate story of the treachery affair business, finally became a subordinate of the man whom he tried to ruin.

“In answer y^e petition of Henry Harwood Leef^t of ye foote Company of Falmouth * * * * *. In case s^d Cap^t Brackett aaccept not y^rof then M^r Walter Gyndall or whom he shall appoynt is hereby Impowered to take y^e command of the foote company of Casco, & all y^e Souldgers y^rin required to y^e obedience to him or his order as y^r Comander during the Court's pleasure.

And if Cap^t Brackett refuse to accept of their p^rposal made for keepinge y^e fort loyall, then s^d M^r Gyndall is hereby Impowered to take & to keepe y^e s^d Fort for y^e yeare Insewing, Or to agree with any p^rson or p^rsons to do it, they being such as y^e Councill shall approve off."

In the tax-list issued in the warrant to the constable to collect from the inhabitants of Spurwink, Richmond's Island, &c., 15 Oct. 1683, "M^r Gendal" is rated £1 : 9 : 4. This is the largest individual tax in the list, and is inserted here chronologically to show his material progress from time to time. At the court held June 25, 1684, the officials appointed him, with five others, to be a "committee to take care of Fort Loyall & to settle a cheiffe officer over y^e same." From this we may presume that Gendall could not attend to the duties longer, owing to the extension of his own business.

But the public sentiment was averse to his retirement from the service of the people. Accordingly in the scheme for the resettlement of the towns that had been desolated by the incursions of the aborigines, he was designated for Falmouth and Scarborough on the 26th of July, 1684. He had already served on the board of trustees for North Yarmouth, and now at one session the court placed the fortunes of two more towns in his hands!

One almost wonders how he found time to attend to all these duties, and the question becomes still more complicated when we find him, Nov. 24th of this same year, acting as one of the selectmen of Falmouth! But now we are seeing the beginning of the end, and the busy life we have been studying is soon to pay the death penalty under the most tragic circumstances. For four years we hear nothing from him in public, and conclude that he had become tired of the many honors heaped upon him by his friends and had retired to the quiet of private business affairs.

The Indians, who had been comparatively quiet for ten years, now began to show signs of malicious intentions. To bring matters to a crisis, Capt. Blackman arrested fifteen or twenty peaceable Indians, at Saco, and held them as hostages for some others who had been committing depredations in the region of the Kennebec. This impolitic proceeding greatly incensed the natives, and, although the prisoners were soon released, they were dissatisfied, and the white people were warned by the authorities to take all necessary precautions for safety. The services of Capt. Gendall were in demand, as usual, and he was ordered to strengthen the fortifications on Royall's River. He had a large crew of men at work in his mill, and he proceeded to the task as a private enterprise. While engaged in this duty, they were surprised and captured by the Indians in the first week of September. The particulars of this affair were related under oath by one Moses Ayer, a servant of the Captain, and we resign the narration to him:—

"The Exacacon of moses Eyers, of Dorchester, in y^e County of Suffolke, aged twenty one yeares, or thereabouts, y^e 22th day of October, 1688. The s^d examinant sayth that about y^e beginning of September last he went in a Canoe with Cap^t Walter Gendall & two other men & a Negro of y^e s^d Gendall's. & two men more in a Bouch Canoe, Intending to goe to y^e s^d Gendall's house, & roweing neere the same both cannoes putt ashore, & it beginning to Raine Cap^t Gendall sent this Examinant & y^e Negroman to goe to his house & fetch a Bagg of Gumpowder w^{ch} he had Hung out to Dry, & by the way as they were goeing to y^e house they heard a man (who Cap^t Gendall had sent to bring up his Cows) cry out Indians, & therefore this Exain^t & y^e negro man Runn back towards y^e Canoes, but before they could reach them this exain^t was taken by y^e Indians & they went towards the other men that soe soone as y^e Indians were seene by Cap^t Gendall & y^e others y^e two men that came in y^e Burch Canco Launched her & went away, but Cap^t Gendall & the two men with him stayed, & Gendall p^resented his Gunn at y^e Indians: that thereupon y^e Indians layd down their arms & Called to Cap^t Gendall to Come to them, saying they Come to heare News & would Doe him noe harme: that then y^e s^d Gendall putt his Gunn into y^e Canoe & went to them & the Indians asked him what was the Reason that y^e Englishmen went from their houses, & why Cap^t Blackman tooke y^e Indians at Saco & sent them away, and y^e s^d Gendall told him that there was News come from the westward that severall Indians & English were lately Killed by Indians on Conechicott River, at Northfield, w^h the Indians sayd they knew nothing off.

And while they were in discourse some other of y^e Indians went downe to y^e Canoe & took the Armes w^{ch} belonged to Cap^t Gendall & y^e other men with him and fired them off, & then seized & bound them all & carryed them about two miles into y^e woods from s^d Gendall's house to a swamp, where they lett Cap^t Gendall goe, but kept this Exain^t & other three persons all that night & the next day carryed them to a place ab^t twenty mile from y^e water side, where there Wigwams were. That y^e Indians that tooke them were about Twelve in number, & that amongst them were Ned Higgins, who was their Captaine, Neconumby and his sonne called Young Neconumby, Sorry Ned, Saragumby, Peece-nose his Brother, Amoscogin Sam & Asamewes, whom this Exain^t knew. That about tenn days after they were taken, & y^e Indians sent to Boston from Saco were come back againe, two Indians & two Englishmen were sent from Lieu^t Co^l Tyng att Falmouth to the place where this Exain^t & y^e others were kept, to speak to y^e Indians & Demand those English taken by them & to tell them that if they would deliuer the captiues & what other things they had taken from the English, the Indians should be sett att Liberty & desired y^e Sachems to goe doune & speake with y^e English. Whereupon y^e Indians Released this Exain^t & more that was with him (the other two haueing before made their Escape) & three Indians, by name Hope Hood, Ned Higgins & Young Neconumby, came with them to Falmouth to speake with y^e English : & further sayth not.

Many interesting points may be gleaned from this important document. It gives us as a new fact the preliminary capture of Gendall before his murder a few weeks later. The Captain was an old Indian trader, and relied too much on his friendship with the savages for safe passage. His willingness to trust them is shown when they engaged him in conversation previous to taking him a prisoner. The news from other sections confirmed the charitably-inclined man in the opinion that they were bent on mischief. Accordingly on his release he went to Falmouth and returned with a detachment of soldiers to guard his valuable property and complete the fortifications already begun. Again we resign the narration, this time to the venerable and famous Mather :—

“When one captain Sargent had seized some of the principal indians about Saco by order of Justice Blackman, presently the indians fell to seizing as many of the English as they could catch, Captain Rowden with many more in one place and captain Gendall with sundry more in another place particularly fell into the hands of these desperate man catchers : but Gendal with his got a release, one can scarce tell how, upon the return of those which had been detained in Boston.

Hitherto there was no spilling of blood ! But some time in September following, this captain Gendall went up, with soldiers and others, to a place above Casco called North Yarmouth, having orders to build stockados on both sides the river for defence of the place in case of any sudden invasion. While they were at work an English captive came to them with information that seventy or eighty of the enemy were just coming upon them : and he advised them to yield quietly, that they might save their lives.

The soldiers that went thither from the southward being terrified at this report ran with an hasty terror to get over the river : but with more haste than good speed : for they ran directly into the hands of the indians. The indians dragging these their prisoners with them came up towards the Casconians : who having but a very little time to consult, yet in this time resolved, first, that they would not be seized by the Salvages : next, that they would free their friends out of the hands of the Salvages if it were possible : thirdly, that if it were possible they would use all other force upon the Salvages without coming to a downright fight.

Accordingly they laid hold on their neighbors, whom the Salvages had seized, and this too with so much dexterity that they cleared them all, except one or two: whereof the whole number was about a dozen. But in the scuffle one sturdy and surly indian held his prey so fast, that one Benedict Pulcifer gave the Mastiff a blow with the edge of his broad ax upon the shoulder, upon which they fell to't with a vengeance and fired their guns on both sides, till some on both sides were slain.

These were as one may call them the scower pit of a long war to follow. At last the English victoriously chased away the Salvages, and returned safely upon the other side of the river. And thus was the vein of New England first opened, that afterwards bled for ten years together!" (Magnalia, II., 509.)

To comprehend the situation thoroughly we will take a look at the battle-ground. John Royall's house, which was a garrison, was on the east side of the river, in that tongue of land that terminates in Brown's Point, as indicated in the coast survey charts. Captain Gendall was ordered to build stockades on the western side of the river at Callen Point, directly opposite Royall's house. Early in the morning of September 13, two of the men were sent across the river to yoke up the oxen and make preparations for the day's work. When they had arrived on the other side they were suddenly surrounded by a party of Indians and hurried into ambush before they had time to give an alarm. In due course the rest of the workmen were ferried across, supposing that everything was in readiness. Nothing had been prepared, and the two sent earlier were missing! The Indians suddenly made their second appearance, and being charged with kidnapping their men, answered with threats and insults. Finding these means ineffectual to provoke a quarrel, one of them attempted to hinder young Larrabee in his work. The exasperated youth seized his gun and shot him dead, at which the contest became general. This alarmed Capt. Gendall, who was ignorant of the state of affairs, being engaged at Royall's, and he rushed to the river only to see his men retreating along the opposite banks, seeking shelter behind the trees. This kind of skirmishing lasted about all day, and the Captain knew that it would be impossible for him to get across, exposed to the sweep of the savages' rifles. Shots were exchanged occasionally, at short intervals, till dusk, when through a cessation of firing, and signals from his men, he knew that their ammunition was expended. Then came the moment for this brave man to act, and procuring a fresh supply of powder and bullets he ordered his colored servant to row him across. Against the entreaties of his wife and friends, he determined to risk the chance of death to save his men, and the float started on its mission. They managed to get safely by the middle of the stream, "but as the float touched the shore he was shot through the body and expired, having only time to throw the ammunition on shore and to say 'he had lost his life in their service. The party were now enabled to maintain their ground till night came on and the Indians retreated." (Sullivan, page 186.)

Thus perished the soldier and hero of Ancient Westcustogo! Who shall say that death did not relieve him of another malicious prosecution at the hands of the Massachusetts Puritans? But his life and the circumstances of his death amply justify the conclusion that he was an honest man and a conscientious, patriotic citizen, in spite of the malice of partisan spirits. His long intercourse with the Indians, which came from extensive business relations, enabled him to judge of their character minutely, and we do not hesitate the conjecture that his opinions were opposed to extreme measures. Perhaps he favored delay longer than the hot-headed aristocrats of the Bay Colony cared to sanction. He knew the perils of warfare by extended personal experience, but many of the fancy soldiers from the Bay region were too desirous of military fame to brook any conservative counsel. Mather, quoted above, tells us how they behaved at the crack of the first rifle-shot. But when war came, a braver man never led troops against the enemy than Walter Gendall, and had he been a citizen of Boston his political and military career would have been assured. As it was, he arose to the surface by force of his own ability, and the men who had tried to disgrace him were compelled to stultify their own edicts by sanctioning his elevation to many important positions. His appointment to the delicate and difficult duties as Trustee for the re-settlement of Falmouth, Scarborough and North Yarmouth is sufficient attestation of his character and judgment. No other person on either of the committees was so honored. Captain Scottom served on two of the boards, but he was a Bostonian by birth, and had influence at the courts. But we abstain from further comment, fully confident that the student of history will accord to him the thrice-earned eulogium,— —"Well done, good and faithful servant!"

But few more things remain to be noted, and we then proceed to those post-mortem documents that legally finish human life in this world. His death produced great depression in this section of the country, and was universally noted. Judge Sewall in a letter to Rev. Increase Mather, dated 8 Oct. 1688, speaks of the death of "Justice Gendale," though we are ignorant of the reason for calling him a magistrate. In regard to his wife, we only know that she married Theodosius Moore, of Bridgewater, soon after this event, but no date is obtainable. The question of descendants hangs on the the interpretation given to Nathaniel Fryer's letter to the Council, before quoted, wherein he speaks of the impoverished condition of Gendall's "wife and family." This may mean children, or persons dependant on him, as his wife's relatives. The fact that no heirs appeared in the probate accounts would seem to favor the theory that he had no issue, or they may have died young.

Two years after his death, the following Inventory of his household and personal property was made at Marshfield, the residence of Moore :—

“A true and perfect Inventory of Such Goods, Chattles and Testamentary Estate of Walter Gendall, late of North Yarmouth, in the Province of Maine, Esq^r, Deceased, which he dyed possessed of, as they were bro^t to us to be app^rsed and are app^rsed by us in manner and form following :—

This sketch of the career of Walter Gendall closes with the simple notice of the lot drawn by his representatives in the division of June 16, 1727, when the new proprietors of North Yarmouth partitioned their common lands. This lot was known for years as the "Gendall Farm," and the point of land that jutted therefrom into Broad Cove retained the name of Gendall's Point. But soon these appellations gave place to modern nomenclature, and to-day not a sign or symbol remains in the limits of the old town to remind the inhabitants or passing strangers of him who was its chief citizen two centuries ago. With truth Parson Shepley says of him, "no other inhabitant had done so much as he to forward the interests of the town," but his name is now unknown save to the musty antiquary. The lapse of time and the sleepless wear of decay have leveled the last vestiges of his famous plantation on the Westcustogo. The farm-houses, the ship-yards and the manufactories live another and a noisier life over the ruins of his busy mills. We search in vain for his burial-place among the sunny fields of Yarmouth Foreside, where for twice an hundred years the sighing of the winds and the melancholy murmur of the ocean have been his mournful requiem.

NOTE—The author desires to express his thanks to W. P. Courtney, Esq., of 15 Queen Ann's Gate, Westminster, London, S. W., England, for many valuable suggestions in the foregoing compilation. To him is he especially indebted for the probable birthplace of Captain Gendall, first calling his attention to the clues which point in that direction. The kindly interest manifested in ascertaining the Captain's ancestry, is greatly appreciated, if not wholly productive of definite results, and the author desires an opportunity to reciprocate.

Mr. Courtney is one of the authors of Bibliotheca Cornubiensis, a work which should find a place in the library of every historical student. It gives much fresh information about the early emigrants to this country, especially of their transatlantic antecedents.

And Whereas the said Trustees or Committee of said Township by Vertue of the Authority so derived did proceed to lay out certain Lotts of Land: and they Gave, Grauted & Confirmed to several persons the said certain Lotts of Land, which they began to build upon and make improvements of untill the bloody Indian warr disturbed them and broke up the said Township, as appears by the Records of the Town book now in the hands of Cap^t Sam^l Phipps, at Charlestown:

LINES

ADDRESSED TO MY GRANDFATHER,

[EBENEZER CORLISS, YARMOUTH, MAINE.]

on his

EIGHTY-SEVENTH BIRTHDAY, FEB. 9, 1850.

Eighty and seven long years have gone,
 Since thou the light first looked upon,
 And Time's rude hand has on thy face,
 Left many a deep and furrowed trace.

Thy once firm step is tottering now,
 And white the locks upon thy brow:
 Dimmed is the lustre of thine eye,
 Thou'rt ripened for thy home on high.

Yes, Grandsire, thou art wrinkled, old,—
 All but thy heart, that is not cold,—
 For neither age, nor time can trace,
 Deep wrinkles there, as on thy face.

How I in childhood lov'd to see
 Thy face, and climb upon thy knee:
 Oft, while I sat in gladness there,
 My hand played with thy hoary hair.

May God bless her, who by thy side,
 Has walked at noon, and even-tide:
 Whose faithful love so many years
 Has shared thy joys, thy hopes and fears.

God of our Fathers! may thy care,
 Keep and sustain this aged pair:
 Receive them when with life they're done,
 Their "battle fought," the "victory won."

Taunton, Mass., Feb., 1850.

LUCY. (388)

JOHN TRUE.

[Dr. N. T. TRUE.]

Among the prominent settlers of Pownal, Maine, was John True.

His ancestor was Henry True, who emigrated from England in 1634-40, and settled in Salem, Mass. John was of the sixth generation. His grandfather, Jonathan True, was the first of the name at North Yarmouth Falls, and his son Jonathan was among the earliest pioneers of Pownal. John True was born in Pownal, August 7th, 1785. He was the second of nine children. Reared among the forests, and inured to labor, he acquired a remarkably strong physical constitution. As was the custom of the times, he spent his minority with his father on the farm, or cutting spars for the West India trade, or making boards, which were then in great demand.

On his majority he hired out with General Edward Russell, and after four years' service, with four hundred dollars in silver he bought a forest-lot adjoining the eastern border of his father's farm and cleared up for himself a home. This was in 1809-10. He married, Nov. 30, 1810, Miss Mary Hatch, daughter of Abijah Hatch, of North Yarmouth, of whom the writer is the oldest son. She died of consumption, Sept. 10, 1819. He married second, Dec. 16, 1819, Miss Esther Allen, of Pownal, who died June 11, 1829, of consumption. He married, third, Mrs. Elizabeth Pote.

of Falmouth.

Mr. True was not a public man. He did not seek nor obtain public office, but he was a good neighbor, farmer and citizen. He was remarkable for his energy and industry. An early riser, prompt in his engagements,—so much so that he would not do another stroke of labor after the dinner-horn sounded, he accomplished a vast amount of physical labor. He never sued, nor was he ever sued by anybody, and it is not known that he was not ready to meet a bill when it became due. “Uncle John always pays his minister’s tax promptly,” was a compliment from his pastor. He studied economy, but was liberal in expenditure when he saw a pecuniary advantage. His farm became one of the most valuable in the town, which was the result of constant improvement in drainage and manuring. He introduced the first horse-rake, in 1827. He was a man of superior judgment in all his affairs.

His infirmities increasing with his years, he divided his farm among three of his sons, took another and moved to the centre of the town, where they engaged in trade. Unfortunately the home building was burned in 1850, when he returned to the farm, and died there, March 28, 1861.

He was fond of society. His house was the stopping-place of hosts of friends and strangers. He was a faithful man to his family. A single word commanded prompt obedience.

He and his wife, with twenty-two others, united with the Congregationalist Church in Pownal, March 16, 1817, and ever after cheerfully aided in supporting the institutions of religion.

He was six feet in height, and had a strong muscular development. His brain was large, indicating strong reflective faculties. His reasoning powers were excellent, and he rarely ever failed in language with which to convey his thoughts. With the advantages of early mental culture he would have made a powerful argumentative speaker.

HARRISICKETT CADETS—(Copied from a broadside printed at the time.) "FIRST ANNIVERSARY | of the | HARRASEEKIT CADETS.

The Harraseekit Cadets,—of which L. D. Townsend was a member,—celebrated their first anniversary at Freeport, June 6, 1836.

At ten o'clock a company of Ladies in Uniform were escorted to the green in front of the meeting-house, when a beautiful standard,—painted by Charles Codman, of Portland,—was presented to the Cadets by Miss Susan R. Kelsey. On presenting the standard to Ensign Hyde, Miss Kelsey addressed him as follows :

Sir : I present to you this standard, from the Ladies of Freeport to the Harraseekit Cadets ; and allow me to assure you, that while their high estimation of your courage forbids a suspicion that it can ever be sullied by an act of cowardice, they feel confident, that, as soldiers, you will be equally distinguished for the practice of those kindlier virtues of humanity, which shed such a lustre upon the triumphs of the brave. Should the shrill clarion note be again heard in our land, and this banner be unfurled on the field of battle, while its graceful folds float amidst the slaughter of our bravest and best, even then may the recollection that it was presented by those whose weakness leads them to look to you for protection and safety, be your strongest incentive to courage and glory.

To which Ensign Hyde replied as follows:—Ladies: In behalf of this company, I tender you thanks for the invaluable gift you have bestowed upon us. Our company is yet in its infancy; and though we must strictly rely upon our exertions, it is gratifying to learn that those exertions have been appreciated by you. It is highly encouraging to us to receive such a proof of regard from such a source. Cold indeed must be that heart which does not at this time quicken with emotions of gratitude and devotion to those whose applause has in all ages been the strongest incentive to deeds of heroism and bravery. The Ladies of Freeport may rest assured that no act of cowardice shall ever sully the brightness of this beautiful banner; and should we be called to battle, our highest aim shall be to deserve by our bravery the highest confidence they have this day conferred upon us.

They then repaired to a tent, where a collation was prepared; after which they returned to the meeting-house, and an address was delivered by Col. John L. Kinsman, of Portland. The Cadets then repaired to the Hotel of S. Thing, and partook of a dinner provided by that gentleman. The music by the band from Augusta was very fine, the weather was beautiful, and the whole performance such as to afford great gratification to the large collection of people who attended to witness them." Notes and Queries.

WHITE—Rev. Amasa Loring, of Foxcroft, Maine, informs me that one of the sons of Deacon John White, of North Yarmouth, (John, he thinks) moved to Arrowsic Island with his mother. He was three times married, and had a large family. He lived with Major Denny till of age. Some of his descendants still occupy the old mansion of General McCobb, on Arrowsic Island. (2-10-'80) (W. M. S. 276)

LANDMARKS—The localities so frequently mentioned in the early history of old North Yarmouth are as follows:—Tobacco Point was the present Little Flying Point, in Freeport. Atwell's Creek was just west of the old Mitchell house (now known as the Whitecomb House). Wetherbee's Creek was probably originated by some careless copyist in transcribing Larrabee's, often written Leatherbee's or Leatherby's, and was either just south of the Mitchell garrison-house or was the creek that bisects Parker's Point. The Larrabee's owned land between these two creeks, and Larrabee's Landing is shown on the Coast-Survey Chart just under the "T" and figures 6 1-2 in Yarmouth River. White's Cove still retains its name, and is the first indentation on the Foreside proper, westerly from Parker's Point.

Bray's Rock lay just north of or just west of Parker's Point, according to which theory you adopt for the location of Larrabee's Creek. I think Weare's Point must have been one of the head-lands of White's Cove, although it may have been nearer to Felts'. Callen Point was where the Mitchell garrison-house was afterwards built. Felt's Falls was where the brook at Cumberland Foreside comes tumbling into the sea. Wolf's Point, Flying Point and Mare Point still retain their old names. S. (390)

THE PRINCE FAMILY.

[By Dr. CHAS. E. BANKS and Miss MARY G. PRINCE.]

ARMS: Gules, a saltire, or, surmounted of a cross, engrailed ermine.

CREST: Out of a ducal coronet, or, a cubit arm, habited gules, cuffed ermine, holding in the hand, proper, three pine-apples of the first, stalked and leaved, vert.

Granted, in 1584, to John Prince, of Abbey Foregate, Shrewsbury, County of Salop, Shropshire, England, by Queen Elizabeth, through her Garter King-at-Arms.

The Prince family are among the few fortunate ones who have a pedigree, transmitted to them from the earliest emigrants, and that, too, from such an accurate source as the manuscript history of the Rev. Thos.

Prince, Pastor of the "Old South" Church, Boston, for nearly forty years, in the early part of the eighteenth century. What his invaluable and pains-taking labor of love, the Chronology and Annals of New England, is to the general student of our own Colonial history, so, to the family antiquary, is his short but exhaustive account of his ancestors, prepared on the occasion of his father's death, in 1728, and first published in the New England Weekly Journal, of July 15, 1728.

These facts he gathered during a visit to the home of his ancestors, in 1711-16, and, while there, his relatives presented him with the family coat-armor, a copy and heraldic description of which is at the head of this article. This escutcheon was granted, in 1584, by Queen Elizabeth, through her Garter King-at-Arms, to John Prince, of Abbey Foregate, Shrewsbury, County Salop, Shropshire, England, is still borne by the Prince family of that locality, and is one of the best authenticated in this country.

The Rev. John Prince, Vicar of Berry Pomeroy, in Devonshire, who was educated at, and took his degree of A. B., from Brazen-Nose College, Oxford, and who wrote and published, in 1701, The Worthies of Devonshire, belonged, undoubtedly, to a branch of the family who have peopled New-England; as he, in allusion to his ancestry, speaks of Mr. John Prince, his Grandfather, of Nower, near Axminster, Sheriff under Sir William Pole, in 1603-4, thus, 'One of my ancestors, John Prince, of Nower, &c.' His father's name was Bernard Prince, whose second wife was a daughter of Philip Drake, of Bystock; one of his wives, Elizabeth _____, died in 1657. Leonard Prince, Rector of Instown, was the youngest brother of Bernard, was born at Nower, in the Parish of Kilnington, County of Devon, and died about 1695, leaving a son, William. All these were descended from a knightly family of their name, still flourishing in Shropshire." Gen. Reg. Vol. V. p. 383.

The ancestral residence of the Princes, in England, is thus described in Views in Shropshire: "The 'White Hall' in the Abbey Foregate, was builded by one Master Prince, a lawyer, and was called 'Master Prince's place.' The building was commenced in 1578, was completed in four years, and is a venerable red stone mansion, white-washed, from which circumstance, as is supposed, its name is taken.

It is lofty, square, and compact, the roof finished with pointed gables, the chimneys highly ornamented, and the whole crowned with octagonal turrets in the centre. The ancient hall has been converted into a spacious parlor, and nearly the whole building modernized.

The 'Gate House,' formerly appropriated to the use of the Chapel, is still standing, and is a part of the garden wall. Some mulberry trees, and a lofty walnut tree, were lately growing against the walls, the only living remains of its former state." The Abbey Church is situated in the suburbs to which it has given the name of Abbey Foregate. It is built of deep red stone, and displays many curious features of ancient Norman Architecture. It formed a part of the richly endowed monastery, founded, in 1083, by Roger, Earl of Shrewsbury. Worthies of Wales says of this White Hall "Master Prince his house stands so trim & finely it graces all the soyle it is in."

From the sketch left by the chronicler, we learn, that, in the reigns of Queen Elizabeth, and King James I., Rev. John Prince, B. A. Oxon., was rector of the parish of East Stafford, (Shefford) Berkshire County, and was a rigid Churchman all his life. Perhaps his strong adherence to these views, was more closely cemented by a marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Rev. Dr. Tolderbury, of London, which was celebrated in 1609. The father-in-law being a strong Conformist, undoubtedly exerted a powerful influence over his son-in-law, but whatever may be the case, the fact remains patent, that the young rector clung to the tenets of his ancestors with unyielding firmness. This will seem strange, when we know, that of his eleven children, four sons and seven daughters, not one embraced the Episcopalian faith, but all became Non-conformists or Dissenters, as they were called. The separation of ideas spiritual did not create any trouble in temporal affairs, for as Rev. Thomas Prince chronicles, "they lived without any breach of amity or affection."

The names of three sons of Rev. John Prince are recorded. Concerning his seven daughters, history is silent. The eldest son, John, was born in 1610, at East Stafford, (Shefford?) Berks. Co., England, and emigrated to New-England in 1633. His second son, Francis, became a merchant in London. The eleventh child, and fourth son, was probably Robert, who emigrated to New-England, and settled at Salem, Mass. He married, in 1662, Sarah Warren, and his descendants now live in Salem and Danvers.

Governor Thomas Prince, or Prence, as it was sometimes spelled, is supposed to have been the first emigrant, bearing that name, who came to New-England. He arrived at Plymouth in the Fortune, Nov. 11, 1621, being then twenty-one years of age. His home in England was Leachdale, in Gloucestershire. He brought with him to America a respectable patrimony. He married, Aug. 5, 1624, Patience, daughter of Elder William Brewster, who arrived on the Ann, in June, 1623. He was chosen Governor of Plymouth Colony, in 1634, and 1638. Governor Prince highly valued Elder John Prince, and used to call him "cousin."

1 The eldest son, John, who was educated at Oxford University, but who, on account of his dissenting views, did not receive a baccalaureate degree, fled to America, in 1638, to escape the relentless persecutions of Archbishop Laud. He had, at first, intended to study for the ministry, but this cherished plan was defeated by his early emigration. He was born, in 1610, the seventh year of James I., at East Shefford, sometimes called Little Shefford, but, at the age of twenty-three, started for the New World, where religious liberty was apparently tolerated.

He first appears at Watertown, Mass., where he was made a freeman, March 4, 1635, and there he married his first wife, Alice Honor, [Honore?], who died early, and left no children*. He soon left Watertown, and took up his residence at Nantasket, (Hingham†), in 1638, which, in turn, was shortly abandoned for a permanent home on Light-house Island, Hull, where he married a second wife, Margaret _____, who was the mother of his twelve children, four of whom probably died before their father, as but eight are mentioned in his will. After her death, he married again, choosing as his consort, Widow Ann Barstow, relict of William Barstow, of Scituate, Mass. She had no Prince children, but one of her daughters, Martha Barstow, married Samuel, (8), fourth son of John, and thus a part of her descendants came to bear the name of Prince.

John Prince soon became a prominent man in the town of Hull, and was the leading man in religious matters, being elected Ruling Elder in 1644, which position he retained till his death, Aug. 6, 1676, nearly one-third of a century. To be an Elder in those days was equivalent to our highest municipal offices, and we can readily believe, now, in view of this elevated position, and his far-reaching influence, that he died, "grately lamented," as saith the chronicler.

*Some accounts name Alice Honor as the mother of the twelve children of Elder John Prince, but Savage credits the second wife, Margaret _____, as the mother of the family. Much of the evidence seems to favor the latter opinion, but the reader must decide for himself.

†In 1637, the town of Hingham, in New-England, gave to John Printe, [Elder John Prince], "Ten acres of land, lying upon Nutty Hill, for a great lot."

Hobart; m. by same, Aug. 29, 1667, to Joseph Joye, (Joyce), at Hingham.

8 Samuel; b. May, —, 1649, at Boston; bap. Aug. 19, 1649; m., Dec. 9, 1674, to Martha Barstow, b. 1655, dau. William and Ann Barstow. She became the mother of five children; she d. at Hull, Dec. 18, 1684. He m. 2d, Mercy (b. Jan. 31, 1662-3), dau. of Thomas Hinckley, last Governor of Plymouth Colony. She became the mother of ten children; she d. Apr. 25, 1735. He d. at Middleboro, July 3, 1728. Of the ten children of Samuel and Meroy (Hinckley) Prince, one son died in infancy, two others in early manhood, and the remaining seven lived to see middle life or old age.

Thomas, the eldest child, b. at Sandwich, May 15, 1687; bap. at Barnstable, June 12, 1687. Graduated at Harvard College, 1707. Kept the Grammar School at Sandwich, and in 1708-9 went to Barbadoes, and thence to England, where he became acquainted with Dr. Watts. He returned to New-England, July 20, 1717. The following year, he was settled as colleague, with Dr. Sewall, in the ministry, at the "Old South" Church, Boston, which position he filled for forty years. He was married by Dr. Sewall, Oct. 30, 1719, to Deborah Denny. He wrote the Chronology and Annals of New-England, a work of priceless value to the historian and antiquary.

His house stood on the east side of what is now Washington Street, (Boston), and nearly opposite School Street. Governor Winthrop once lived in the same house. The site is now (1865), covered by the South Row. He died at Boston, Oct. 22, 1758, aged 71. In his will, he bequeathed his books and manuscripts, which were deposited in the steeple-chamber of the church, to the "Old South" forever, on condition that they should never be taken from the room. Many of them, however, were destroyed by the British soldiery, during the Revolution. A few found their way to England. Among these, a manuscript history of Plymouth, by Governor William Bradford, was discovered, in 1855, in the Fullham Library, belonging to the Bishop of London. What remained in America of his collection, was placed, soon after July, 1866, in the Public Library of Boston. The town of Princeton, Mass., was named for him.

Nathan, b. Nov. 30, 1698; bap. at Sandwich. Graduated at Harvard, class of 1718. Was educated for, and, probably, ordained to the ministry. Died at Rattan(?), July, 1748. Eliot's Biography speaks thus: "Dr. Nathan Prince, a distinguished character in our literary annals; a man of superior genius to his brother, and, in Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, superior to any man in New-England. He was fellow of Harvard College for many years, and a candidate for the Professor's chair. He wrote a book upon the Laws and Constitution of that Seminary. This was after he was discharged from the Government of the College, on account of his intemperate habits, which destroyed his usefulness."

SOME ACCOUNT OF SAMUEL PRINCE.

"Samuel Prince was born in May, 1649, at a house on Milk Street, in Boston, his mother being there, at the time, on a visit. On returning home, his parents then belonging to the church in Hingham, he was on the 19 of Aug. next ensuing, carried thither, and baptised by y^e Rev^d Peter Hobart. Being of a comely countenance, fair complexion, white and ruddy, of a lively temper and active genius, Mr. Joliffe, of Boston, Merchant, who had a particular friendship for his father and mother, having a fancy for this young son of theirs, while a boy, took him home to his house in Joliffe Lane, (now, 1866, part of Devonshire Street, from Milk to Water Street), where Capt. Tyng now lives, in Boston, in order to bring him up to merchandise; and here, I suppose, he learned to write and cypher, but being exceedingly fond of his parents, brothers and sisters, and other lively playmates at Nantasket, he could not be persuaded to stay in Boston, and within a twelve-month his parents yielded to his entreaties, and took him home again.

He lived with his father, in Hull, twenty-three years, i.e., to June, 1672, when he went in a sloop, in the lumber trade. He had a house and lot adjoining easterly on his father's house at Hull, and, Dec. 9, 1674, he married Martha Barstow, and lived in said house. Their five children were all baptised by Rev. Mr. Whitman. In 1678, he was admitted Freeman at Hull. About this time, [1684], trading at Sandwich, and setting up a shop at Elder John Chipman's, y^e people were so much pleased with him, that for his encouragement to come and live among them, they, in Town-Meeting, gave him a lot of land, and meadow around, near the heart of the town; upon which he speedily built a pretty large house, and about a quarter of a mile below, he dug a canal and dock, from the Town's harbor creek to the upland, and on the northerly side of the dock, he built a commodious wharf for vessels, especially his own sloop, which he kept for constant trading.

In Sept., 1686, he married, at Barnstable, his second wife, Mercy Hinkley, eldest daughter of Hon. Thomas Hinkley, last Governor of Plymouth, and took her to his house at Hull. Dec. 24, 1686, they removed to their house in Sandwich, where they lived happily twenty-three years, and brought up a family of ten children. He was Justice of the Peace for the County of Plymouth, in the reigns of Queen Anne [after 1702], and Kings George I., and II., was nineteen times Representative to the General Court in Boston, from the towns of Sandwich and Rochester. He removed to Middleboro, probably about 1723, and was the Representative of that town under the new charter of 1692. He died, July 3, 1728, while on a visit to his son at Middleboro. Mr. Prince was a man of great natural abilities, and quick apprehension, a pious and good man; of tenacious memory, penetrating thought, ready and strong powers of arguing; contemplative, never idle, modest, and courageous; well versed in the Scriptures and divine things, open-hearted, free, generous and hospitable; zealous for vital and pure religion, and an affectionate lover of his country, and admirer of its ancient people."

9 Sarah; b. Feb. 22, 1651; d. May 24, 1653.

10 Benjamin; b. 1652; bap. Apr. 25, 1652; d. at Jamaica, W. I.

12 Deborah; b. Aug. 25, 1656; m., 1678, Wm. King, of Salem.

13 THOMAS; b. at Hull, July 8, 1658; bap. at Scituate [Hull?], Aug. 3, 1658. He settled in Scituate, Mass., and Dec. 23, 1685 [1679?] married Ruth, dau. of John and Mary (Brewster) Turner, of Scituate, and twin sister to Mary, wife of Isaac Prince. Ruth Turner was born at Scituate, in 1663, and after the death of her first husband, married Israel Sylvester, of Duxbury.

PATERNAL AND MATERNAL DESCENT OF MARY & RUTH TURNER.

1 Paternal: Humphrey and Lydia (Garner) Turner came from England to Plymouth, Mass., in 1628, and settled in Scituate. He engaged in the tannery business, and died there, in 1673. John, son of Humphrey and Lydia Turner, was born in England, and came with his parents to America. He lived in Scituate, and married, Nov. 12, 1645, Mary, daughter of Jonathan and Lucretia Brewster, and grand-daughter of Elder William Brewster. She was born in Holland, during the sojourn of the Pilgrims in that country.

2 Maternal: William Brewster, Gent. b. 1560, 2d Eliza., at the Manor Hall of Scrooby, [one of the residences of Cardinal Wolsey], North Nottingham County, England. Educated at Cambridge University. 1620. He came to Plymouth, Mass., in the Fortune, Nov. 9, 1621. Removed to Duxbury, 1632; and to New-London, Conn.,
1649. Died at New-London, Sept., 1659 (1661?)

Mary, dau. of Jonathan and Lucretia Brewster, was born in Holland, and came to New-England with her parents. Married, Nov. 12, 1645, John Turner, of Scituate. Thus, her twin daughters, Mary and Ruth (Turner) Prince, were great-grand-daughters of William Brewster, Teaching Elder of the Pilgrims.

Thomas Prince died at Barbadoes, West Indies, in 1704, aged 46. The chronicler states that "the sons, as they grew up, took to sea," and as Thomas Prince died in a foreign land, Barbadoes, we may infer that he was a sea-faring man. Probably he was in command of a merchant vessel that brought freight to and from tropical countries.

Children of Thomas and Ruth (Turner) Prince.

14 Thomas; b. July 10, 1686.

15 James; b. 1687; m., Sept. 27, 1716, by Rev. Cotton Mather, to Deborah Robinson.

Benjamin resided in Duxbury a few years, and, in 1727, removed to North Yarmouth, with his wife and five children. In this third and permanent settlement of the town, he was apportioned in the division of land, Lot No. 1, on the Foreside, (now Prince's Point), including Basket Island. Nov. 18, 1730, he united with eight other citizens in founding the Congregational Church, which was the first ecclesiastical organization in the town, and the tenth in Maine. He was elected Collector of the town, Oct. 14, 1734, and was sent as one of a committee of three, with the town clerk, Mar. 22, 1736, to Bridgewater, to interview Rev. Mr. Keith with regard to accepting a call to the new church. The town allowed him £15 for the expenses of this journey. He was a very prominent man in the town. He died, Dec. 5, 1737, universally respected.

She emigrated with her husband to North Yarmouth prior to 1742(?) They united with the church, Oct. 10, 1743. Her daughters, Alice and Hannah, married in North Yarmouth. She died at North Yarmouth, Mar. 15, 1768, aged 73.

She (Hannah Cushing) was born at Hingham, May 8, 1722, O. S. ; died Feb. 6, 1814, aged 92. Both were received into the church, Mar. 3, 1745. He died Nov. 25, 1809, aged 90. They lie buried in the graveyard at Cumberland Centre, where a stone marks the place of their repose.

Paul came with his father to North Yarmouth in 1727, and, in boyhood and youth, bore his share of the hardships incident to a newly settled town in Maine. At the time of their marriage, as it was, in those days, deemed essential that every family should be within reach of a place of refuge from the Indians, the young couple resided a few years in the "Loring Block house," with their brother-in-law, Mr. Solomon Loring, and there two children, Sarah and Cushing, were born. Soon after 1745, they chose, for a permanent home, a spot convenient to the Scales garrison, and on it built their one-storied house which was to be the home-nest for their ten children, and which, it is said, never had a room finished off, though the parents were wealthy enough to give each son a hundred acres of land, and each daughter fifty acres. Some of this land is still owned by the heirs of those to whom it was originally given. Their house stood on the site now occupied by the dwelling of the late Capt. Reuel Drinkwater. In Aug., 1762, 2nd Geo. II., Paul Prince, Yeoman, sold his inheritance, the farm numbered as Lot No. 1, or Prince's Point, to John Drinkwater. The deed is still in existence, and is in the possession of Captain John B. Drinkwater.

Mr. Prince was an able and energetic man, and sustained his share in public and private trusts. When the difficulties which led to the Revolutionary war arose between the Colonies and Great Britain, he warmly espoused the cause of his country ; and, at the time Col. Jeremiah Powell was invited to take a seat in General Gage's Council, he, by energetic representation of the facts in the case, succeeded in dissuading Colonel Powell from accepting a position which would have committed him to the cause of the Tory party.

21 Sylvanus; b. at Duxbury, Sept. 17, 1722; m. Elizabeth Johnson (b. 1729; d. Apr. 7, 1800.) Both united with the church, June 16, 1771. He died, Sept. 18, 1790.

25 Lydia; b. (1732?) bap July 8, 1733; d. young.

THE ROYALL FAMILY.

[Dr. CHARLES E. BANKS.]

The genealogy of the most prominent settler of Ancient West-custogo, whose name is perpetuated in the beautiful river that winds through the old town, has been neglected heretofore by local historians. It would seem that his long sponsorship over the settlement that grew mostly by his energy, might entitle him to the grateful remembrance of chroniclers. The subjoined facts are the result of a cursory search among various historical collections, and are submitted with diffidence as an attempt to resurrect the fading memory of this energetic and noted family. The descenddants of our pioneer honored the name in social and political circles and became allied to the Peerage of the British Empire by frequent inter-marriage.

1 WILLIAM¹ ROYALL, "cooper and cleavor of tymber," came from London, England, at the request of the Massachusetts Bay Company, the officers of which were then directing the colonial affairs at the English Metropolis. The "First General Letter of the Governor and Deputy of the New-England Company for a Plantation in Massachusetts Bay, to the Governor (Hon. John Endicott) and Council for London Plantation in the Massachusetts Bay in New-England," among its numerous advices and instructions contains the following reference to our settler, which probably settles the year of his arrival.

"In Gravesend, the 17th of April, 1629.

Loving Friends: Wee heartylie salute yo^u. We have receiued your lettre of the 13th of Septem^b; by w^{ch} wee take notice [of your safe] arriveall, blessing God for it. * * * * * William Ryall and Thomas Bride, coops and cleavors of tymber, are entertained by vs in halfes wth M^r Cradock, o^r Go^v. Pray ione others that can assist them vnto them, and lett them p[']vide us some staves and other tymber of all sorts to bee sent vs by the Talbot. Whelpe, or the other 2 shippis that come after.

* * * * *

Wee haue advised yo^u of the sending of William Ryall and Thomas Bride, cleavers of tymber."

He resided for some time at Salem, then the headquarters of the general officers of the province, and had a grant of land there which has since borne the names of "Ryall's Side" and "Ryall's Neck." His emigration to this part of the country can be approximately determined, for he bought land of Thomas Gorges, Esq., agent of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, Knight, Lord Proprietor of the Province of Maine, as follows:—

"The Copy of a Grant from Thomas Gorges, Esq^r, Deputy Governour of the Province of Main, in behalf of S^r Ferdinando Gorges, Knight, Lord Proprietor of said Province, unto William Ryall.

Know all Men by these Presents, that I, Thomas Gorges, Deputy Governour of the Province of Main, according unto the Power unto me given from S^r Ferdinando Gorges, Knight, Lord Proprietor of the said Province, have, for divers good causes & considerations me thereunto Especially moving, given, granted, bargained, sold, enfeofed & confirmed unto William Ryall, of Casco, his Heirs & Assignes forever, these ensuing Tracts of Land, viz:—

The Land whereon his House Standeth: being Bounded on the East where the Lot of Arnold Allen begins : on the South with the Sea : on the West bounded with a Creek's mouth running on the back side of his House, and on the North side bounded with a Creek which is on the Back Side of his House : also an Island before his House, being by Estimation Twenty Acres, be it more or less : also a Point of Land lying between the River Westgusttugo and the River of Chusquissacke, bounded on the South side with the River of Westgusttugo, on the North side with the River of Chusquissacke, the Easter end not above Four Pole over, and the Wester end from the falls of Westgusttugo to the Parting of the River of Chusquissacke, lying near North & South, being by Estimation Two Hundred & Fifty acres, be it more or less.

To have and enjoy all & Singular the afores^d p'mises to him the said William Ryall, his Heirs & Assigns forever, yielding therefore & paying to S^r Ferdinando Gorges, his Heirs & Assigns, at or before the Nine & Twentieth Day of September, the Sum of Ten Shillings, Yearly, forever.

In Witness whereof I have unto this present Deed of Sale set my Hand & Seal at arms, this 27th of March, 1643.

THOS : GORGES, Dep^y Governour.

This is a True Copy of the Original examined & recorded the 28th of March, 1643, by me, Roger Gard, Record^r." Book 1, part 2, folio 3. Title—Gorges to Royall, 27 March, 1643. The first title deed in North Yarmouth. (62.-97-2)

This enables us to locate quite accurately his land and house-lot. On account of the troubles relative to certain conflicting patents, reference to which is made in the able and exhaustive article by Wm. M. Sargent, Esq., on "Derivation of Titles in North Yarmouth," [p. 424, OLD TIMES], he re-purchased the same land of the rival claimant, Colonel Alexander Rigby, of Rigby, Co. Lancaster, England, 13 April, 1646.

He married, probably in Boston, Phebe Green, daughter of that Widow Margaret who married Samuel Cole. She was the mother of all of his children, who were all born in North Yarmouth. At the outbreak of the first Indian war he removed to Dorchester, and there died, 15 June 1676, and his widow two years later, 16 July 1678. Their children were:—

2 i William² ; b. 1640.

3 ii Isaac².

4 iii John².

5 iv Samuel².

2 WILLIAM² ROYALL (*William*¹) b. North Yarmouth, 1640 ; a freeman of Mass., 1678 ; with brother John became possessed of his father's estate in North Yarmouth in consideration of support and maintenance of his parents during their life. He removed to

Dorchester during the war, and never returned. He died there, 7 Nov. 1724, and his son erected a fine monument to his memory, bearing this inscription: "Here lyeth y^e Body of WILL^m ROYALL | of North Yarmouth in the PROVINCE | of MAIN who departed this Life | NOV^{bre} Y^e 7th 1724 in y^e 85th year of his Age | this Stone is Erected to y^e Pious Memory | of his Father by his Eldest Son ISAAC | as the last Act of a dutifull Remembrance." His children by wife Mary were:—

6 i Isaac³; b. 1672.

7 ii Hannah³; b. 7 Aug. 1677.

8 iii Martha³; b. 6 Sept. 1679.

9 iv Jacob³; 29 June 1682. Administrator of his grandfather's estate.

10 v Samuel³.

11 vi Jemima³; b. 1692; d. 9 Nov. 1709.

6 COLONEL ISAAC³ ROYALL, (William² William¹), b. 1672, at North Yarmouth, became a successful and opulent merchant at Antigua, West Indies, where he resided for forty years and amassed a large fortune. Returning to America, he purchased, 26 Dec. 1732, of Mrs. Elizabeth, widow of Lieutenant-Governor Usher, over five hundred acres of land in Medford, Massachusetts, for which he paid the princely sum of £10,350. Here he intended to spend his declining years in enjoyment of the fruits of his energy and industry. Accordingly he erected a magnificent mansion of bricks manufactured from clay found on the premises, and became a fine country gentleman, dispensing hospitality with a liberal hand.

Capt. Francis Goelet, in his Journal describing a journey from Boston, says,—“Situatèd neare to which is a Fine Country Seat belonging to M^r Isaac Royall, being one of the Grandest in North America.” He did not live long to enjoy his new home, for he died there, 7 June 1739. His will, dated 27 Dec. 1738, was proven 9 July 1739, and he left, beside his estate, £10,000 of personal property.

He married at Antigua, 1 July 1697, Widow Elizabeth (Eliot) Oliver, daughter of Asaph and Elizabeth (Davenport) Eliot, and grand-niece of the famous Indian apostle of that name. She died 21 April 1747, having made her will 4 April previous, which was proven 21 May following. She devised to son Isaac, sister Sarah Dunton; grand-sons James, Thomas, Isaac and Richard Oliver; grand-daughters Elizabeth Royall, Elizabeth Vassall, Elizabeth Oliver, and Mary, daughter of Isaac Oliver; to sons-in-law Robert Oliver and Henry Vassall; to Jacob Royall.

Children:—

12 i Asaph⁴; b. 1 Apr. 1699; d. 24 July 1699.

13 ii Isaac⁴; b. at Antigua, 1719.

14 iii Penelope⁴ : b. at Antigua, 1724 ; d. 19 Nov. 1800 ; m. Col. Henry Vassall, 28 Jan. 1742 ; he was b. 25 Dec. 1721, and d. 17 Mar. 1769.

[Note : There were other children, undoubtedly ; but they must have died young, in the West Indies, as they are not mentioned in the wills of father or mother.]

13 COLONEL ISAAC⁴ ROYALL, (*Isaac*³, *William*², *William*¹). b. about 1719, in Antigua, West Indies, the heir to his father's great wealth, and the last male representative of the elder branch of the Royall family. His political career was a long and honorable one, being a Provincial councillor for nearly a quarter of a century.

Col. Isaac succeeded to his father's estate, and occupied the old mansion which still continues to be called the "Royall house." Here he lived, in elegant style, for the period of nearly forty years, entertaining with hearty liberality, and ranking among the great men of the community for hospitality, charity and honor. In private life he was upright, and possessed the esteem of his fellow-townsmen. He was a warm supporter of the Christian Church, and strict in his religious observances. He was prominent in all public improvements and charities, and accounts of his munificence are upon the public records. He represented his fellow-citizens at the General Court for many years, and, besides returning his salary annually, he presented the chandelier which adorned the state-house during that time. Amid the confusion and excitement of the first encounters which took place so near him at Concord and Lexington, his fears prevailed, and he fled, endeavoring, but unsuccessfully, to secure a passage from Salem to Antigua.

He afterwards went to Newburyport and thence sailed to Halifax, which he reached in May, 1775. After a short stop there, he proceeded to England, where he resided until his death by small-pox, in 1781. His estates being confiscated, the income of the property in Medford was duly paid into the State Treasury until 1805, when the Legislature released the estates to the heirs for £16,000 sterling.

By his will, he gave evidence of his attachment to the community which he deserted, by leaving one hundred acres of land for the use of the common schools of Medford, and a bequest of silver plate to his old church. Mr. Brooks, in his history of Medford, says, "It appears that he loved his country and his friends, and could he have been assured at the outset that the United States would secure their independence, and that he should be the undisturbed possessor of his beautiful country-seat at Medford, he would have given generously for the cause of freedom. But he was timid, and supposed, as such men usually did, that the army and navy of Great Britain would soon be here to burn, sink and destroy * * * * *. He was a Tory against his will. Not that he loved the Colonies less, but England more."

He loved his country, but neither supported her in her asserted rights and position, or upheld the measures of her oppressors. Sabine, in his American Loyalists, says that his property was all confiscated. If so, the claws of the harpies employed did not reach everything, for he enjoyed a patriot gentleman's revenge and showed his resentment in making a gift of more than two thousand acres in Worcester County, Mass., to Harvard College, where he had not been educated, to establish the Royall Professorship of Law. This chair, enabled to become permanent in 1815, has remained the most popular in that great institution.

Colonel Royall married Elizabeth MacIntosh, 27 Mar. 1738. She died, 14 July 1770. Children:—

15 i Elizabeth; b. 7 June 1740; d. 9 July 1747.

16 ii Mary MacIntosh; b. 10 Jan. 1744-5; m. Geo. Irvine.

17 iii Elizabeth; b. 30 Oct. 1747; m. Sir Wm. Pepperell Sparhawk, grandson and principal heir of Sir William Pepperell, Baronet. Graduated from Harvard College, 1766. Succeeded to his title in 1744. Royal Councillor. Fled to England during the Revolutionary struggle, and died in London, 2 Dec. 1816, aged 70. Their daughter Harriot married, 14 July 1802, Sir Charles Thomas Palmer, of Wanlip Hall, County of Leicester, and became the ancestress of the present Baronial House of Palmer. (Burke's Peerage.)

18 iv Miriam; m., 23 Dec. 1773, Thomas Saville, Esq.

With the death of these daughters, the elder branch of the Royall Family ceased, having attained a celebrity equalled by few of the famous colonial names. This branch, the most noted of the stock, attained its position by commercial enterprise, and retained it as few do whose social rise is secured by wealth. Theirs was not an ephemeral climax, for to-day scions of a noble house trace their maternal ancestry to "Will^m Ryall, coop^r and cleavor of tymb^r," of "Westgustogoe in Caskoe Baye."

3 ISAAC² ROYALL, (*William*¹), the second son of the emigrant, was born in North Yarmouth. He removed to Dorchester during the war with the Indians, at which place he permanently settled. A freeman of Mass., 1690. A carpenter. Built the new church edifice in 1670; purchasing the old one for £10 sterling. Married Ruth, daughter of Thomas and Sarah Tolman, who died 1 May 1681. By a second wife, whose name is unknown, he had the last three children enumerated below:—

19 i Ruth; b. 2 Nov. 1668.

20 ii Mary; b. 8 Sept. 1670; d. 23 Dec. 1751; m., 20 Nov. 1696, John Bird.

- 21 iii Samuel; b. 21 July 1677.
 22 iv William; b. 17 Mar. 1680.
 23 v Isaac; b. 10 May 1682.
 24 vi Jerusha; b. 15 Jan. 1684.
 25 vii Robert; b. Jan. 1688; (living with wife Mercy, 1741, in Dorchester.)

4 JOHN² ROYALL (*William*¹), was the only son who returned to the old town after the Indian troubles, and remained. He was appointed as one of the Trustees for the re-settlement, 26 July 1684, having previously been at York, Maine, where he took the oath of allegiance to the King, 1680. In 1688, he was tried for selling rum to the Indians on Sunday, as related on pages 225-6, OLD TIMES, and ordered to Boston for further examination. The next year he was captured by the troublesome natives, and carried to the eastward, but was soon released by Baron Castine. Possibly he may be the John Riall who was an inhabitant of Boston in 1695. His wife was Elizabeth Dod, a grand-daughter of Nicholas Davis, Esq., of York; but the court records which contain a serious impeachment of her virtuous carriage, leave an unfavorable impression of her character. But one child of theirs is known to us,—Phebe³, who married James Tyler, of Arundel, and lived in Scarborough.

5 SAMUEL² ROYALL (*William*¹), a resident of Boston as early as 1665, and a cooper, having learned his father's trade. His grandmother's second husband, Samuel Cole, granted him land in Boston, 1653, which he subsequently confirmed in his will, "out of regard for his grand-mother." He was enumerated as among "Masters of Familys" in Boston, 1674, which is our only authority for making him the ancestor of some of the family who lived in Boston. His wife was Sarah ———.

10 SAMUEL³ ROYALL, (*William*², *William*¹), according to the History of Medford, had two sons. Possibly his wife was a Winthrop.

26 i William.

27 ii Samuel Winthrop; m. Naomi, daughter of Robert and Martha Bayley, 22 May 1759. She was born in North Yarmouth, 12 June 1742.

There was in Boston, 1695, a JOSEPH² ROYALL, who was, undoubtedly, a son of our pioneer. He was a sail-maker by occupation, and, by wife Mary, who was admitted to the Charlestown Church, 14 Jan. 1682-3, he had:—

28 i Joseph; b. 5 Sept. 1673.

29 ii Mary; b. 14 June 1676; d. 11 Dec. 1690.

30 iii John; b. 25 May 1679; d. 21 Dec. 1690.

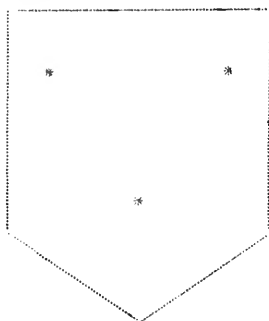

- 31 iv William; b. 24 Nov. 1680.
 32 v Sarah; b. 15 July 1683; d. 28 Mar. 1688.
 33 vi Sarah; b. 28 Sept. 1688; m. William Tyler.
 34 vii Phebe; b. 14 June 1690.
 35 viii John; b. 31 May 1692.

28 JOSEPH³ ROYALL (Joseph², William¹?) Captain of the Galley Margaret, in 1697. Probably the father, by wife Margaret, (who was received into the 2d Church, Boston, 24 Oct. 1708), of the following children:—

36 i Mary; bap. 25 Apr. 1703.

37 ii John; bap. 4 Feb. 1705.

38 iii Joseph; bap. 10 Nov. 1706; m. Margaret Mallet, 11 Nov. 1728. He is the one mentioned in York Deed Book 12, p. 201, as "only son of Joseph Royall, and great-grand-son of William Royall of Casco Bay."

DIVISION OF CUMBERLAND FROM NORTH YARMOUTH, MAINE.

[WILLIAM M. SARGENT.]

Memoranda relative to the Division of the Town of North Yarmouth and setting off of Cumberland.

To the Honorable Senate and the Honorable House of Representatives of the State of Maine in Legislature assembled, May term, in the year of our Lord, 1820 :—

The subscribers, inhabitants of the south-west part of North Yarmouth, ask leave respectfully to represent : That the said town of North Yarmouth comprises an extensive territory, to the amount of eight miles square, or thereabout ; that the Islands in the Bay constitute a part of said township, and in consequence thereof, the town meetings are held, the town offices kept, and the town business done at North Yarmouth Corner, so-called, thereby subjecting your petitioners to the necessity of extensive travel, some of them at least a distance of nine miles to attend a town meeting, and perform the ordinary duties of a citizen.

Your memorialists further represent the business of the citizens inhabiting the south-west section of the town is naturally disconnected from North Yarmouth Corner and Falls, in as much as those who are engaged in maritime and lumbering pursuits prosecute and concentrate their business to and from Broad Cove in said North Yarmouth. Your honorable bodies will readily perceive the inconvenience accompanying your petitioners in the prosecution of town business in so extensive a tract of territory, and may be assured that by a just computation that at every general or full town meeting in said town, a distance of about nine hundred miles is travelled, (principally by your petitioners), over and above what would be travelled should a division of said town take place.

Your petitioners therefore pray that the said town of North Yarmouth may be divided : and that the following described tract thereof may be incorporated into a new town as follows, namely : Beginning at the sea shore, or on the dividing line between the farms of Alexander Burr and Reuben Loring : thence running north-westerly to the easterly corner of the one hundred and twenty acre lot numbered 1 on the west side of Royal's River ; thence north, twenty-six degrees west, to the north corner of lot numbered 5 ; thence south, sixty-four degrees west, on the dividing line between lots numbered 5 and 6 to the south corner of land owned by Joseph Barstow in lot numbered 6 ; thence north, twenty-six degrees west across said lot ; thence south, sixty-four west, between lots numbered 6 and 7 to the dividing line between the one hundred and one hundred and twenty acre division, west side of Royal's River ; thence north, twenty-six degrees west, on said line to the south-easterly side line of the two hundred and eighty acre squadron numbered 1 ; thence south, fifty four degrees west, to the easterly corner of the four hundred and fifty acre squadron No. 2 ; thence north-west to Gray line ; thence, on Gray line, south-west to the corner of said North Yarmouth ; thence south-east on Falmouth line to the sea shore ; thence on said course until a line drawn from the first mentioned bounds, south, twelve degrees east, shall intersect the same, including the Flats; together with Clapboard and Basket Islands.

Your memorialists further represent that the division as prayed for, would create no inconvenience as it respects the roads in said town; neither will any school district as now fixed be cut or divided by said line; nor, as we conceive, would any inconvenience arise to the remaining part of said town; nor its interests in any manner materially affected.

Your petitioners, willing to share in the public benefits, are also (as is usual in such cases) equally willing to share in the public burdens. To promote the interests of the new town, without a desire to or probability of injuring the old, is the desire of the subscribers. The justice of the prayer is our argument, and the aid of the government our hope. To your Honors, as in duty bound will ever pray, your Petitioners.

WILLIAM STUBBS, and 138 others.

State of Maine.—In the Senate, June 7, 1820. On the Petition aforesaid, Ordered, That the Petitioners cause an attested Copy of their Petition, with this Order thereon, to be inserted in the newspapers published in Portland, three weeks successively, the last publication to be thirty days at least prior to the next session of the Legislature, that all persons interested may then appear to show cause (if any they have) why the prayer of said petition should not be granted. Sent down for concurrence.

JOHN CHANDLER, President.

In the House of Representatives, June 7, 1820. Read and concurred.

THE MERRILL ROAD, POWNAI, MAINE.

[By N. T. TRUE, M. D.]

This road has a distinct history in the annals of Pownal. It takes its name from Josiah Merrill, the first settler. It commences about one-half a mile southerly from Haskell's Mills, and runs in a south-easterly direction for a mile and a half till it reaches the Freeport line when it extends to the old stage-route, one-half a mile west of Freeport Corner.

The most of the farms on this road were originally of a swampy character, and covered with a heavy growth of hemlock and spruce, with here and there a "king pine." Many of these pines were of immense size. Occasionally a stump remained whose diameter was as great as the length of an ordinary hay-rake, while their tops, which remained, indicated a height of nearly or quite one hundred feet. There was also intermingled with them a heavy growth of rock maple, white maple, birch and beech. The pioneers cut and hauled the cord-wood to Davis' Landing as they cleared their land, while the hemlock and spruce logs were hauled to Haskell's Mills to be sawed into boards. The farmers hewed the timber for their dwellings, and made their own shingles and clapboards, by rifling and shaving the clear pine. Nothing else was used in those days.

In later geological times, the whole town was an extension of Casco Bay, studded with low islands. Bradbury Mountain alone presented a bolder aspect. The low lands were covered with water, while the streams formed creeks where small vessels could have ascended. Consequently, the low lands are composed of clay and sand, or an inter-mixture of these, forming loams, from the light sandy to the heaviest clay. Marine fossils, like those now living in Casco Bay, are occasionally found in digging wells.

A low moraine extended east and west, forming a swell of land on what is now known as the "Daniel Merrill farm," while east of that a high sand dune was formed over the moraine. This extended one-half a mile. The geologist finds here an interesting field for observation. These lower lands are known as belonging to the Champlain Period. The early pioneers settled on the gravel ridges, which are of an earlier age and known as the Drift. They had little faith that their sons could make a farm out of a swamp.

The first man who had the courage to commence a farm on this road, was Josiah Merrill, of Cumberland. He was the son of Jacob Merrill, of that town, and was born on the spot now occupied by his half-brother, John Merrill, and for £40 sterling he bought fifty acres of land on the west side of what is now the Merrill Road, and one-half a mile from the Freeport line. He purchased his farm of Timothy Noyes, as shown by his deed dated March 10, 1788. This and the adjacent farms, were known as the Powell lands, which were owned by Jeremiah Powell, a resident of North Yarmouth.

Like other young men of his day, he shouldered his axe and penetrating the thick forest, commenced a clearing on the west end of his lot, with the expectation that a road would eventually reach him; but which, owing to the roughness of the country, he never realized. Having made a clearing and erected a log house, he married Miss Eunice Merrill, of Falmouth, (now Portland), and moved into their new habitation in 1790. For fifteen years they labored to make for themselves a new home. Six children were born in the log house.

They knew scarcely any books but the Bible and hymn-book; but, with them, and their sterling puritan principles, they reared their children to habits of industry and with a reverence for the sacred institutions established by their ancestors.

These six children are all dead; but they lived to become important factors in the history of the town. During this time they had no carriage-road; while it was difficult for a horse to reach them through a "bushed-out" path for two-thirds of a mile. He had a neighbor, a cousin, Abel Merrill, who commenced a clearing west of him, on what is known as the Hutchin's Lot. He built a log house, but remained only a short time, and sold out to Joseph Hutchins, and removed from the town.

Mr. Merrill having cleared into field and pasture a large portion of his farm, decided to build a house on the east end of his lot, where the road known as the Merrill Road was bushed out so that a horse could pass through. A corduroy road was subsequently built the most of the way. Here he built a large one-story framed house in 1805, into which he moved, and he and his wife prosperously spent the rest of their days. Here he raised a large orchard, in which there were certain trees well known to the boys in the vicinity.

Mr. Merrill was a man of a quiet demeanor, prudent in all his affairs, and a good man. Mrs. Merrill was really his presiding genius. High-toned in character; industrious in her habits; an excellent guide in her household and an ornament in the church to which she belonged, it is doubtful if, among the pioneers of the town, any one excelled her in all the elements that go to make a noble woman. She died, Feb. 25, 1837, aged 65. Mr. Merrill died July 7, 1846, aged 81. As they advanced in years, his son Daniel took charge of the farm, which had been much enlarged by additional purchases, where he yet resides. They united with the Congregational Church in Freeport until the organization of a new church in Pownal, in 1811.

It may be worthy of note, that Mr. Merrill bought his land in North Yarmouth, which was set off with the rest of the territory into the new town of Freeport, and, finally, into the still newer town of Pownal.

12 Eunice ; b. June 12, 1813 ; m. Elbridge True, of Freeport. Reside on the Merrill Road.

Mr. Daniel Merrill informs me that he can well remember when it was an unbroken forest between his house and the meeting-house at the centre of the town, save when broken by an occasional clearing. It was seldom that one could see the nearest house, in consequence of the intervening woods.

It may be of interest to state that the whole family of children were singers. They attended the singing-school, while four of them were teachers of the art. It was no unusual thing, forty-five years ago, to see the family of nine children seated in the singing-gallery with the oldest son as the leader, and the youngest son as the performer on the bass-viol. Four of these sat in the church choir for more than half a century. (2-26-'80)

BOUNDS BETWEEN FAL-MOUTH & N. YARMOUTH
FIXED BY COMMITTEE
MAY 16, 1727.

North Yarmouth, in Casco Bay, May 16, 1727. This day the Committee of the General Court, for Resettling the town of North Yarmouth, mett with the Selectmen of Falmouth, in order to agree upon, renew and settle the bounds between the towns of Falmouth and North Yarmouth, having notified the Selectmen of Falmouth the fifteenth Instant for that purpose: Being all mett upon the Spott, agreed and concluded the bounds between the towns to begin at a Great White Rock lying on the Shoar, near high water mark, about three quarters of a mile from Gendall's Point, so called, in North Yarmouth aforesaid, and we then Unanimously agreed a northwest course to be the boundary line between the said towns: Tobias Oakman, of Marshfield, being there, affirmed that about fifty years ago he remembers that was the place and course agreed upon by the Selectmen of those towns, and that ever since that course hath been reputed to be the boundary between the said towns.

Some of the Proprietors of North Yarmouth did also allow that a northwest course was fixed and agreed upon by a Committee of the General Court, appointed to settle the bounds between the said towns, about nine or ten years ago: and M^r James Parker, of North Yarmouth, declareing that he was present when the aforementioned Committee concluded and agreed as aforesaid, and now showd the aforesaid Rock from whence they took their departure and marked some trees on the upland running that course: This done, agreed, and concluded on, as witness the time and place abovementioned.

The following statement, it is believed, is without a parallel in this country : Of the fourteen adult children, seven are still living (Feb., 1880), that were born of a Revolutionary soldier who had but one wife. Of these, Paul is the oldest, aged 91 ; and Olive the youngest, aged 70. To think of a man who was born one hundred and seventeen years ago having seven children living, is almost beyond belief. N. FIRST COFFEE—Mrs. Webster Seabury writes: "I recollect hearing my Grandmother Gray say that the first coffee brought to North Yarmouth was sent from the East Indies by Capt. Joseph Young, who wrote his wife that it would make a good drink for the table. After boiling some and finding it unpalatable, Mrs. Young had it carried up into the garret, where it remained until Capt. Young returned from his long voyage. He then told her it was to be roasted over the fire, and ground, before it would make good drinking coffee. This must have been some time in 17—."
